DEVOTED TO PURE LITERATURE, NEWS, AGRICULTURE, HUMOR, &c.

EDMUND DEACON, HENRY PETERSON,

PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, MAY 26, 1860.

BETABLISHED AUGUST 4, 18 WHOLE NUMBER PROPE

AN AIR-CASTLE.

WHITTEN POR THE SATURDAY STREETS POST, BY FLORENCE PERCY.

I have built a castle in the air, High and proud and beautifully fair; Only your sweet smile the pile can crown-Pray you, dear one, do not dash it down '

All my hopes are builded in its walls : All my life is shattered if it falls.

o) and

Ans.-

ial in-we be-

CHA-

ugh,

Queen of all its wealth you long have been-Pray you, dear one, come and dwell therein ! I have had a vision—and it seemed

That your great love dowered me as I dreamed : Do not bid the blossed hope depart-Pray you, dear one, do not break my heart Clasp me with your earnest sympathies;

Help me with your deep magnetic eyes; Let them be my beacons from to-day Pray you, dear one, do not turn away ! I have waited all these lonesome years,

Silently, but yet with many tears. Keeping love, and faith, and hope for you-Pray you, dear one, let my dream come true!

Do not say that all the patient pain Of my love has been endured in vain-Do not spoil my castle with your frown-Pray you, dear one, do not dash it down !

THE DANE. A STORY OF THE TROPICS.

WRITTEN POR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

[Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1860, by Deacon & Peterson, in the Clerk's Office of the District Court for the Eastern District of

That night there was a great fete given in onor of Della's return. The beautiful girl, attired in robes of the contllest embroidery, her gleaming looks bound by a fillet of gold and appeared more like a young and triumphant queen, receiving the homage of her subjects, than the daughter of an English planter. The rooms were througed with the beauty and ohivalry of Georgetown; the conservatory hung with lamps set in vases of alabaster, afforded a promenade wherein the mses were regaled with the richest tropical fragrance, and the eye feasted with colors whose gorgeons tinting no other climate can rival; while clusters of the most tempting fruits, oranges, lemons and pines hung or were placed within the hand's reach. side, the colonial band discoursed the most ravishing music. Forty-seven instruments composed the band, but it was situated at such a distance that the music sounded sweet and mellow as it reached the house. Manuel, like a restless spirit, wandered here and there, now feeding his absorbing pasupon the peerless beauty of Della, now nursing in his heart the fire of distrust and jealousy till he was nearly driven mad. Finally, unable any longer to endure his own anguish while near the unconscious object of his ove, he threw on a light cloak and hat, and started from the house with the intention of walking his disquiet away if that were possible. He passed down the mango avenue; the a spot of wonderful beauty, an Indian paraon was shining with a lustre seen nowhere but in the tropical regions, and in broad waves of silver it lay across the patches of young pine apples that bordered the estate. The have much strong water, or he no say that;" against the glorious sky-a thousand strange voices sounded from the near canals and the umbrageous forests in the vicinity, while the tinkling music of a waterfall added to the charms of the night. As Manuel moved along, goaded by bewildering thoughts, he fancied once or twice that he heard a footfall near him, and again that he saw a shadow across the path. Presently he was aware that his steps were dogged, for a form emerged from the thick mangrove undergrowth that lined the edges of the walls, and with a gutteral sound stood directly before him. He was a keen-eyed, cunning-faced Indian. His head was surmounted by a crown of beads and feathers, his neck encircled with strings of fish's teeth, and a tattered red blanket tied by a strip of bark to his waist dangled far below his knees. His bronzed and powerful chest was bare. He was short of stature, but his manner was not without a certain dignity.

"Ah! Wa-wa-nosh!" said Manuel, recog-nizing a chief of the Carib tribe, who occasion-all devotion, and has no other being on whom ally brought wild game to the Everglades, to lavish the wealth of her love, she will marry what are you here for now ?" 'Come to catch piraca," replied the Indian, in his low, peculiar voice. "Big white men want him soon; most time to catch himmost time to salt him."

"Yes, but you are out of the way; the river runs in another direction," said Manuel.

"Me hear music," said the savage; "come to see big white man's little squaw; she very good," and he ended with a grunt that denoted asked Wa-wa-nosh.

"Ugh !" grunted the Indian, "she very

DEACON & PETERSON, PUBLISHERS.

NO. 132 SOUTH THIRD STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

Manuel paused for a noment, looking steadily in the Indian's eye. "Wa-wa nosh," he said, sinking his voice,

"have you got any fresh wourali on hand? "No-no good; make him soon," returned the Indian, warily. "Make him fresh! make him strong.

White man buy some ! good for deer." "I'll see about it," murmured Manuel, still wrapped in deep thought; "look here Wawa nesh - do you want to earn a big aum of money-two, three

"Ugh!" grunted the Indian, and in the vivid moonlight Ma nuel saw the black eyes sparkle.

six, twenty silver dol-

"Well-come here, Wa-wa-nosh-deeper in the shade. I want to tell you something."

They drew back fur-words to speak to him."

"Ugh!" was the answer.

"You saw the big white man's pretty daugh

The savage responded that he did. "Well, I love her; you understand me; I love her very much, and wish to make her my

"Ugh! white man want squaw go live in his tent," said the Indian.

"Yes, that is what I mean. But, Wa-waosh, I am not a big man like her father. I have no house; no land; no gold; and plenty white men have, who want to make her their he kill red man too."

wife, too—you understand?"
"Ugh! lilly boy Injun wants chief's daughter; no git her, 'cause plenty big warriors about."

"That's the very thing. But I love her; I shall die to see her marry another."

"Ugh !" said the objef, while his lip curled contemptuously, "white man have soft heart; plenty squaws."

"But I care only for her. Now I want you to steal her for me."

The Indian made an impatient movement. "Hold. Wa-wa nosh; let me tell you all. You shall steal us both; take us captives, you know; and I will give you great silver pieces; see. I have some now," and he gingled some loose coin before the Indian's covetous eyes. "But what Wa-wa-nosh do !" he responded, quickly. "Big white man give Indian plenty to eat-plenty powder and shot." "No matter-I'll give you more. Listen Wa-wa-nosh. Your tribe tell me that there is dise, up in the mountains, that never yet has been trodden by the white man; is it so !"

"Ugh! Manao!" muttered the chief, pulling uneasily at his blanket. "Buck Injun

"Well, never mind-they have said it. Now you Carlbs know the secret entrance to this spot, where the rocks glisten with precious stones, where the birds are more gorgeous than mortal eve has ever seen, and the river runs over sands of gold. Is it not so?"

"Ugh!" responded the Indian, understanding but a part of his rhapsody, "but if white man go there, he must never come out agin."

Dane, "a barren rock would be heaven to me." Then he added in louder voice, "I am willing never to leave that garden-I never more wish to see the face of a pale skin There, when once the grief of leaving her friends is over, and she sees that return is impossible, she will submit to her lot. The won ders of that beautiful Manos, with its serpent guarded entrance, its crystal waters and beds of gold, will ultimately efface the remem me; she will be my own; mine forever," he said exultingly. The Indian, who evidently wondered at this long speech, changed his position with a motion indicative of weariness and a desire to end the conference. Again the tempting silver, interspersed with bits of gold, was held before his eyes. "How does white man want me to do!"

"Simply this," was the reply; "bring some "Then you saw her," said Manuel, his own Indians, on a day I shall set for you. I will take the lady to ride; we will drive as far as

MANUEL AND THE CARIB CHIEF.

nosh, or Manao, as you call it, I will give you one hundred dollars in gold."

ing up his arms in delight, but in a mement, composing himself, he asked,
"But what take you too, for! what for hind. ing himself, he asked.

both !" "So that if we should be overtaken," replied Manuel, cautiously, "big white man shall not kill me for stealing away his child." "Ugh " cried the Indian, sagely, "suppose men can save yourselves, of course. You day and not notice that he was ill at ease. move forward-captives."

"Ugh-and lose hundred dollars!" grunted the chief.

"No-you shall have the hundred dollars on the very day you capture us—you shall He bantered Manuel;—in a thousand little Della retired early to bed. Rose had begged take them out of my pocket, you know," he ways contrived to show his influence over the privilege of visiting a sick sister, and was said significantly.

"Good! I come to morrow-let you know to-morrow," said the Indian, with a grim And after a few more words the two parted.

band still discoursed sweet music-the feet of the dancers could be heard tripping over the marble floor.

On the moment of Manuel's entran she listened : blushes brightened her cheek.

Along the glowing vistas of brilliant waltzers e looked-his brain dizzy with the sightthen drawing pear, he moved by Delia, purposely brushing against her dress. She glaused up.

Why, Manuel " she cried, "where have you been all the evening; we have missed

Did you miss me !" asked the young Dane. The voice sounded singularly between his teeth, and that look of mingled fire and oftness, sent the blood to her heart and back again.

ing," said Lieutenant Warren, carelessly, "we shall be too late;" and before Delia could reply, or give scarcely an answering look, she was hurried away with gentle vio

CHAPTER IV.

THE HANDSOME STRANGER. THE SPECTRE AT MID-FIGHT.

Most of the guests returned to the city early on the following morning, loud in praise of the magnificent entertainment, and the exceeding ovelinees of Miss St. Lemoine.

By Della's earnest request, little Mary Wooen, the niece of the Governor, remained, and her brother also.

The latter admired Della as much as he dared stood as yet the highest in her estimation. Mr. St. Lemoine also extended an invitation to Bernard-all of whom were mightily delighted to stay; se for nearly a week the Everglades was to be honored by their presence.

wood trees, whose slender branches growing fall, and follow the trail round the rocks that designs upon her, that he thwarted nature by low and interfacing made a secure shade.

"Now," said Manuel, his face all a glow, "Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words to speak to him."

"Wa-wa-nosh must listen. I have important words have a list of the with the trail to with you; and if you carry us safely to Ma- yet master. M. Bernard, however, was truly, deeply kapired with love for the peerless crea-Already he was willing to throw himture. The Indian sprang forward exultingly, throw- | self, with his immense fortune, at her feet-

but he was timid.

So matters remained while the bolder and more reckless Warren, little dreaming that he stood on the very verge of a precipice, appeared to possess the most decided variage and depend ground. He walked, rede, sang, and danced with her, while she seemed perfectly at ease in his presence, and looked for his approbation as eagerly as that of her father. It was "Oh! but if we are pursued, you and your not possible that she could meet Manuel every glance, and feeling that perhaps he loved her, she grew more reserved that she might not undesignedly encourage him. Lieutenant Warren, however, used his power ungenerously. Della-treated him as an inferior, and roused the hot temper of the youth to a steady, bolling heat, that never cooled in his pre-

Manuel waiked towards the house. The grew lurid-" wait till the opportunity comes -and if that plan fails-then, look out for yourself-I have that which will drink your blood and none be the wiser."

Two days after the fete a stranger appeared caught sight of the fairy like figure of Della. at the Kverglades. He came with letters from She was standing by the side of Lieutenant the most eminent men in America, to pursue Warren, and her eyes were cast down while his labors as a naturalist and lover of science in the wilds of British Guiana. The splendid appearance of this man, immediately impressed all who looked upon him. Somewhat above the middle height, his form was symmetry itself. His halr of raven blackness shaded a brow. lofty and pale with thought; and singularly ongh his even were of a deep, calm blue maiden in his presence that it was as rare as ogether, or came near each other, there was a her breathing deeply. similarity in their appearance that was absolutely wonderful. Both had raven hair and well shaped brows, and more singular still, of eight or ten years in their ages, and they sion that uncurbed passion and unrestrained will gave at times to his countenance. neither the stranger nor Manuel being aware of there-possibly Kian had spread it out. short time at least. Towards Della he showed she tried the two doors leading into the hall.

never heard before.— His voice was a superb contraite, and threw body at shooting and fencing, and astonished Mr. St. Lemoine into a speech to the effect that he had seen many ac-complished gentlemen, one that united hood with the utmost fuish of manners and ologance of person, young prices Little Mary Woods declared herself (prither behind a clump of the yari-yari, or lance. the Willow-weil fall. Then we will leave the long since exhausted. Still it was with special raptured" with him; but Della, a little piqued guests returned. There was to be a ball at Government house on Monday evening, and late in the afternoon, an order coming from the Commandant, sent the Lieutenant in a hurry into the city. Once more Manuel and Mr. 8t Lemoine had Della all to themselves, but Manuel seemed no longer delighted with the privilege. On the contrary, he looked careworn, and his eyes were heavy, as if he had not slept well of late. The stranger had gone at the invitation of his excellency to Gove house. Sanday passed. Mr. St. Lomoine was not well enough to attend Church, and Della preferred to stay at home and read to him. know how; but we must be found unable to There was mute worship even in his casual hours moved on languidly. In vain Della streve to force Manuel into cheerfulness, he lounged on a distant sofa and would only answer in monosyliables. Prequently he left the room and returned only to resume his moodiness. not expected till the morning. Kian being more than usually communicative, commenced on her favorite topic, and talked of wraiths, ence. warnings and apparitions, till poor Bella's "Walt," muttered the Dane, while his eyes blood ran cold, and in every white object she

Well there, chile, honey!" exclaimed the old woman, seeing that Della's face tooked as de style, p'raps; I'se old, ye know, honey. White as the pillows it pressed, "I's an ole' fool, and that's de fact. 'Spect old master'd With trembling limbs the young girl arose, give me a caning if he know'd i told you such that dreadful vision yet fresh in her mind.

"Could I have dreamed it?" she asked her tell : I's seen sights in my day, chile-"

"Never mind, Kian, " said Della, "just open the curtains at the foot of my bed; looking out in this splendid moonlight may calm the fearful! nerves you have unstrung, and send me to deep! so calm they were that one was impressed window commanding a glorious prospect of and Manuel yet lingered. The former greeted with the eminent purity of the man. No grossness seemed to linger about him. His smile the brocaded curtains, opened the lace net tenance; the latter gave her one harried the brocaded curtains, opened the lace net tenance; the latter gave her one hurried, took the coldest heart captive, and well for the that folded the bedstead round, and the full flood of glorious tropical moonlight filled the his own thoughts. beautiful room. Della, gazing out upon this Even Manuel, so chary of his admiration of vivid lustre, felt the soothing influence of naate, looked upon the stranger with a softened ture. She did not sleep, however, but listened glance, and if he spoke to him, it was with to old Kian, humming and moving from Della's room to her own little closet, until the old wo-Singularly enough, as the two men stood man mumbled her prayers, and soon she heard

The great clock in the hall struck ten, then lutely wonderful. Both had raven hair and eleven. Gradually the many sounds grew blue eyes—both possessed very prominent and less around the household, and finally ceased. Nothing could be heard save the myriad voices when Manuel smiled, he favored the naturalist of the forest, the rostling of the cool wind from fast. I wish I was well enough to drive you, still more. Apparently there was a difference the west, and now and then the silvery notes for I have sent the coachman to town with a of the Guiana mocking-bird. In vain Della message for the Governor." might almost have passed for brothers, but for strove to compose herself to sleep-some mysthe extreme irritability suggested by Manuel's terious influence held her eyes wide open. At nervous lips, and the almost repulsive express. length a nervous tremor seized her. The moon ling as she remembered the vision. had nearly gone, but it was still light enough Della to descry every object in the chamber. She was the first to notice this extraordinary like- gased round on the familiar things that met traying his inward exultation. So it was ness of which she spoke to her father. He said her sight. There stood the couch where Rose that it became apparent to him as he saw them usually slept. A white, shadowy form seemed more together, and one after the other the to lie along its cushions. Della remembered he saw, however, that the gallant soldier whole household began comparing the faces, after a while that she had thrown her mantle the discussions they occasioned. Mr. St. Le- arose to reassure herself; yes, it was her lace Lieutenant Warren-to Earl Tracy, and M. moine urged the new comer to remain so mantle. Smiling at her own nervous fears, heartily that he accepted the invitation for a but not able, nevertheless, to conquer them, almost a reverential courtesy of demeanor. He They were fastened both with key and bolt. At The Karl sincerely admired Della St. Lemever attempted, however, to engage her atten-moine. Love, he could not—the passion was tions, but evidently believing that the hand-at another to call Kian, but what could she her favored lever, he contested himself with quistly looking on. That he was accomplished was soon discovared. Della curpyised him early one morning extemporising on the piane, such strains as she afterwards declared she had never heard before.—

The voice kernek tweive. Why did the helew sound make her shiver? She lay there we longer able to look on a soone of beauty, for the pale recording light came in so faintly it made the nearest objects ghastly. As she watched and listened, she became conscious of a singular sound that seemed to precess from the back of the bedsteed, and nearly overheard. It was quite dusky now. A vacuation. head. It was quite dusky now. A vague ror crept along her nerves, and almost paraly-and her. She strove to cry out, but could not. tirely in the shade by She was certain she heard a movement; the its richness and flexibility. He engaged readily in all the sports supported; a cold wind blew across her face, the weak best every

Unable to move, ahe lay there, seeming to shake the bed with the heavy beating of her heart. A cold sweat broke over her, so that she felt as if enveloped in a wet shroud. Oh, what was it? this unearthly presence—for presence there was—she felt it. She knew something bent ever her, and the thought sent ice-chills from brain to foot she felt a breath upon her cheek -a horrible consciousness of a presence she never, till he met the for mortal to behold. She thought of her mether who had been dust so long; of the ghostly warnings said to have been given to her at dead of night. Did these unearthly beings now come to haunt her child? She tried to pray; in vain: terror swallowed all her thoughts: she tried to bring her hands together, the clasping might reassure her; she could not. Once, only once, she gathered sufficient courage to lift her eyes, but the sight she saw curded her blood with horror. A misty white words, in a strange, sepuichral voice,

"Drive to Dead Man's Book to morrow with shape garlanded about with falling crape were foreaking her when she heard the Manuel. Remember, and be silent." The word "remember" was then repeated thrice, the singular, sliding sound occurred again, and Della, half-dead with terror, felt that the spirit had gone. Weaker than an infant she lay there, making countless efforts to call Kian, until insensibility occurred, from which she must have fallen into a deep sleep, for she was wakened only by the grasp of the old negrees.

"Tought to Marst'r you never was gwine to wake up 'gin, Miss Della! Here's breakfast been ready this half hour, and everybody waiting till they just couldn't wait no longer, and you sleeping like a dead man. Laws, you mus' have laid awake long time las' night lookin' at de moon. It's my conviction dat young gais allers does like to look at de

"What time is it, Kian ?" asked Della, rais ing her head languidly.

"Laws, Miss Della, sun's three hours high, nore too. I'se been totin' roun' de room as hour, sartin. Ye'll find everything ready jes' as Miss Rose has it, honey, on'y not quite in self again and again; "no, impossible! My mother saw these things; it is likely I shall be followed by them; but oh, it is fearful, too Quietly dressing, her mind too painfully pre-occupied to talk with the old negress, The headboard of the bedstead was within Della, after finishing her toilet, walked lansearching glance, and then appeared intent on

"I feared you were ill, daughter," said M.

St. Lemoine, anxiously.
"I am not quite well, father," replied Della;
"I believe I need a drive," she added, with a forced smile, her even unconsciously turning toward Manuel.

As she spoke, a momentary triumph made his eyes shine, but when she looked at him his face was passive.

"Yes, yes, by all means; I will see that the orses are ordered out immediately after break-

Perhaps Manuel will take charge of me this once," said Della, her voice almost falter-

"Certainly: I shall be very happy, I am sure," said Manuel, his manner far from b settled. " Pray tell me is there such a place as ' Dead Man's Rock !" " asked Della, assuming a care less mein, as the horses sauntered slowly through a palm avenue.

"Oh yes;" replied Manuel, "some four miles from here, up country—but, although it is a lovely drive, I would not advise you to go there," he added, not a muscle of his face changing.

"Why not, pray !" asked Della, looking at se have been bands of hostile India n that part of the country," cald Mowerlly, "cald though I don't express would be hardy enough to attempt to rob us, yet I don't guite like to go in their violally un-

Elab de You, you have rings on and wear a watch, while I have a sum of money with me."

"Let us go back then, and leave them at

"We have driven a considerable distance." Manuel, "and if you are going to conthouse this grouing, you have no loss. You can conceal your rings in the carriage—an Indian's eye would be taken with the glitter. But I think the best plan would be not to go at all, but turn the horses etion, and visit some less

"Oh! by all means go there!" cried Della;
"you nassla"s think to frighten me, if I am a woman, for I am very brave, I secure you," the said laughingly, while her heart was sink-"We can just go there, you know, and

" As you wish," said Manuel, urging the wall kept steeds over the hard road.

What a glorious morning!" said Della, ing long enough to note the acacla-hedges the brilliant bloom of the cactus not yet d of dew. Then she sank back languidly the cushions and scarcely a word was

CHAPTER V.

DEAD MAN'S BOCK-THE ADDUCTION

The bamboo trees threw arching branches roes the road. Now they saw a forest of the Banyan multiplying itself by thousands, while underneath its slender trunks the ground was brown and dry. Paroquets and wiskodoes flit-ted in and out among the tremulous leaves, and the little partridge timorously flew before them, the scarlet trumpeter startled them at times with the war-like notes that vibrated strangely on the still air. Sometimes they met sams reflecting the brilliancy of the un clouded heavens, from whose edges flocks of times drove through rich valleys, where the luxuriance of vegetation, the glorious tinting of fields, trees, and flowers, moved Della to utterances of delight.

They left the carriage, for the road began to narrow as it approached the rock, and leaning Manuel's arm, Della was assisted over the roughening path, until they drew quite near the object they sought.

"There is Dead Man's Rock." said Manuel. se they eame in sight of a projecting cliff that ed out from the masses of foliage on every side like a sonare table of gray stone. "Shall I tell you how it came to have so gloomy a ame !" he added

Oh, ne-fer pity's sake don't let me hear any more of the horrible," oried Della; "If you knew how much I hear at home from old she added, fearing she had betrayed

See, what is this ?" queried Della, pointing to a small, feather-tipped arrow, by whose point a strip of white bark was pinned into the

"We will soon and," said Manuel, un astening the arrow; "it is nothing but a bit of bark—some Indian signal, pethaps."

Why !- but there is writing upon it

Writing upon it-where ?" queried Manual turning it over and over in his hand.

You certainly see it-here, give it to me now you can read it, can you not? 'Go on further till you see a white tent in the forest," and she held it exgerly up before

"Miss Della, are you joking me!" asked Manuel, apparently striving to hide a smile. "Did you really mean that you saw writing on this bit of bank? Then why do not I?"

Della stood ashast looking blankly towards him, the strip of bark still grasped between her fingers. She was in a terrible excitement she even doubted him as he, gazing carelessly at the missive made a foint that he saw nothing. At length her arm relaxed—the blood rushed to her cheeks, and her eye lighted with a strange fire.

"Very well," she said, with unnatural calmness, " the message then is for me alone. But you will go with me, Manuel."

"Go! message!—you words are blind, Miss Della. I cannot understand you at all. What glamour has come over you, that you see a mage here, on this smooth, untrac Do you wish to go into the forest? You see there is but a narrow, beaten track."

Yes, we must go till we find a white tent," said Della, referring to the bark.
"A white tent; what! in the woods here?

The Arowacks and the Caribs are somewhere hereabouts, but they never live in tents, but huts-like the brick-houses in miniature at It is ranhpose, Miss Della, for us to pursue the way farther; let me urge you to educe it is almost peop."

"If it were almost night," said Della, "I must go. Will you accompany me, or shall I find tay way alone !"

"My door Della Miss St. Lemoine, I mean implore you to return. Think of your father's anxiety; he would never forgive me, if anything happened to you," said Manuel, with wall dissembled avaiety.

"Loan think of nothing at present but the purpose before me," said Dolla, with an admirable firmness, "and I promise you no blame shall attach to you, my good Manuel. -you did not use to need so much she said, a regret in her gentle mrging,

"I will go wherever you command, Miss Della," he replied, apparently quite sub ik you; the horses will stand, I supose," she said, moving forward.

"Yes," replied Manuel, "I have fu permit me to sek, have you-any e purpose in thus following this ge direction, as you think it? May I ask expect to meet any one—to—" tly excited. She did his eyes almost a flerce purple.

"Let me last the way," said Manuel; "you are not strong enough to bend those branches,' and he stepped before her. "I wonder if Sie Walter Raleigh over cam through these woods per mused Della, as she looked through the tree-trunks from side to side. "The Indians promised, you know, to lead him to Manoa—the Golden Land—but they were treacherous. Do you suppose, Maand, there is such a place?" "I don't doubt it," replied the young be to find it! Our old Kian toils the most marvellous legends about it—she has heard them from the Indiana. What are you stopping for, Manuel?" she asked, as the Dane

"Had we not better return?" he said, his "Oh, no, not for worlds, yet. Are you weary !-- for my part I feel as fresh as ever You are lister what do you hear !" "I thought I heard footstops," whisper I confess I am something of a cow ard in these places-if I was only armed !-we "Do you really think there is the least dan ger of being waylaid ?" asked Della. there certainly is a noise! Would the Indian harm us? I hear steps. Look! look-oh! Ma mel-save me! save me! mercy, oh! mercy! They were surrounded. So stealthily had they gided out from the undergrowthfour hideously painted savages, with Wa-wa much at their head, that they had bound betl Della and the Dane accurely before the fright ened girl found the power of speech. There they muttered together in their uncouth dis lect, and making motions, bade them follow the two feremest, while two others walked in

"Oh! Manuel-Manuel-this is my insane folly! 'cried the terrifled girl-"we can do nothing; we are wholly in their power. Oh! my father! my father!" she cried, in heart-

"Be calm, Della-they will not dare to arm us-they wish only to rob us. You have your jewels still, I see : I, however, am searched and stripped; they have taken a hundred dollars - all I had in the world."

"Oh! Manuel-give them these rings-my ratch-my bracelets; will they let us go fo them! They may have them all if you can only make them understand. Ah! how fast they waik, the wretches-I am wearied out."

The Indians shook their heads with a grunt Della's offer. Her plaintive voice touched the Daue's heart. He longed to fold her in his arms and bear her over the narrow path.

"It is of no use," he said, affecting a de spairing tone-"these Indians are Caribs, and I do not know a word of their language. You saw just now that they would not answer even my signs.

"God help us, then-oh! my blindness! my rashpess! perhaps I have sacrificed both lives. Oh! my poor Manuel, forgive me that I did not listen to you."

The features of the Dane worked with son uncentrollable emotion as Della bowed her head, while tears fell down her cheeks like

"Never mind, Della-don't worry yoursel ne doubt it will all turn out for the bestthese Caribs are avaricious fellows-wait till have an opportunity-I will make them understand that they can have money for our ransom," said Manuel-" our absence will be bands. soon noted by your father he will use every means of pursuit. Ah! there are horses for your sake I am glad.

"Oh! don't say that!" shricked Della, they are swift, and will only bear us faster away."

They had emerged from the forest into beautiful plain, sprinkled with flowers as far as the eye could reach, and bordered, seemingly, by impervious forests. Della was quick ly mounted, the savages never beeding be piercing cries, and on they flew like the wind, the horse's hoofs striking noiselessly upon the green carpet of moss, grass and flowers. Again they entered the woods, again emerged into a plain divided by a deep and swollen river Here were two canoes in reatiness, and Manucl recognized at once by the commetion of the near water at his feet, that they could not be far from the falls of the Essequibo, at all times dangerous, but now peculiarly so, from the fact that the river was much swollen, and the clouds seemed every moment on the point of discharging more rain. The air had suddealy become oppressive, and the sky was lowering. The Indians paused to consult to-They talked for some moments, while gether. Della, grown more familiar with their savage faces, watched them as she stood drooping by the side of Manuel. "Oh! what do you think they are talking about ?" she cried, in low, hurried accents "What frightful creatures they are! Will they cross this river, do you believe? Are there not falls over there ! Hark ! the roaring grows more distinct. Oh! Manuel, they will not surely place us in these f.agile boats! it makes me shudder to look at them. See, the leaves of this bush are curling; there is going to be a fearful storm-for this is the pimise bush, Kian calls it, and the omen never fails

Oh! my father! my father!" "Lean on me, Della," said Manuel, gently. "I wish my arms were only at liberty, I would support you, for you are weary. Have patieno They probably see the storn econing, and will not dare to cross here. (Perdition if they don't !") he muttered under his breath, then added aloud, "If they wait, who knows but our friends may have time to find us-(curses if they do!") he muttered be

As the Dane was to act the part of the cap tive he could not speak to Wa-wa nosh, but he stched every motion of the savage, and gather ed from his gestures that it was impossible to erose the river that now began to heave an swell from its centre shoreward, as the wind after an intense hush meaned in the dista

"It will be a fearful storm, and we are un-protected," sail Della, the team gathering in her eyes as the strong blast came dashing the waves high upon the banks, throwing mingled cuuning and triumch that lighted up water over their feet, and bending the tre ike wythes.

Again the Indiana bee ware brought, Dolla and Manuel m turning they dashed along the edge of th river, changed their course by taking a sent that appeared broken through bushes and stanted undergrowth, and led them comen high precipitous rocks whose gaping deluged with falling water, and a with rank vince and flowers that crept about their edges. Here they found a shelter in cave-like rock, where the dried moss forme comfortable seats, and had apparently been left there for that purpose by travellers, or by the Indians themselves.

The storm was now bursting in all its fury, but Della and Manuel were sheltered, and the savages had leasened the bandages from their hands. They could hear on all sides fourful roaring in affright at the tempest. The rain dashed against their rocky enclosure, and the crash of falling trees amounced that the storm was making awful havoe. Wa wa-nash, with his three companions, were busily seen their horses at some little distance, unip by the fear that their captives would escape. Indeed it was doubtful if they care to further the accomplishment of the purpose in hand, now that their covetoneness was satis-fed—the treacherous fellows had more than once meditated leaving the prisoners to their fate, as they did not want to make an enemy of the "big white man."

Manuel stole out to them, leaving Della un der the pretence that perhaps he could discover some way of escape. He found Wa wa-nosh, who, with Indian stolidity, stood with folds arms under an overhanging rock.

from the Everglades !"

"Bixty miles," said the savage. "Oh, no, impossible. going over this river?" Well, when are

"No tell-river much swell," was the reply.

To-morrow, perhaps! The Indian shock his head.

'He must, Wa-wa-nosh," exclaim hee-fless that the rain was wetting him to the skin, "they will pursue us-they will look for "No help it," muttered the savage; "if Great Spirit give big rain, how Wa-wa-nosh going to help it ?"

'Then all is lost," cried Manuel, striking the ground with his foot. "I will not lose her thus. Wa-wa-nosh, strike into the forest tomorrow, carry us a hundred miles, where no white man can find us."

"You give me hundred dollar agen!" asked the Indian, with a knowing look.

"Oh, curses! I gave you the hundred for the purpose of taking me off, a great ways; and now do you expect you have earned it by to-day's work! No-you must go; keep As soon as this storm is over, you must take us away, very far; do you under

"Me understand," said the Indian, quietly. "And will you do it?"

"Me do him; take Ingin, go off big way and find a piace where nobody ever know. ome back, lead little squaw into wild woods; pale face become injun, perhaps," he added, with a cunning smile. "Yes, pale face become anything for her sake," replied Manuel, as he left Wa-wa-nosh, and entered the cave, where Della, frightened at the storm outside, trembling at the soliimself; "having no other object to lovetime, her heart will twine itself round me," will be do when he fods we don't return? I am certain he will use every means in his power to find us. God be thanked, that we are detained by the storm! Perhaps if we had ossed that river"-she shuddered

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Anour FLOUNCES. Some enterprising genius has been literally "picking the ladies to pieces." Not finding anything to amuse himself with, he has been making an abstract of the facts and figures connected with the latest l'aris styles. In making a lady's dress, ornamented with fifteen flounces, the needle of the wearied seamstress must travel over the extent of nine hundred and twenty-seven feet. Twenty-three feet is a moderate computation for the waist, sleeves, &c., and we have a It sounds rather formidable, don't it? We suspect the wearers of these interminable flounces stitching they carry about in their rustling silks and floating tarintans.

An old negress, in Alabama, says she don't know how old I is, but I cooked for de hands dat dug the Chatahooche riber." Rice paper is not made from come rice, as is often supposed. It is manufactured rom the pith of a plact of the bread fruit conne brought from the western parts of China, chiefly to Cauton, where the manufacture of this paper and painting designs upon it give employment to several thousand nor Some years ago a party of Cambridge sophers undertook, for a scientific object, to menetrate into the rasty denths of Wheel Fortune Mine. The venerable Professor Fa raish, who made one of the number, need to relate with infinite gusto the following startling incident of his visit :- On his ascent in the ordinary manner, by means of a bucket, and with a miner for a fellow passenger, he per poived, as he thought, certain unmistakal symptoms of frailty in the rope. " How ofter do you change your ropes, my good man ?" he inquired, when about half way from the bottom of the awful abyes. "We change them every three months, sir," replied the man in the bucket, "and we shall change this one to morrow, if we get up safe?"

There is a Rabbinical tradition that purest snow, out of which the angels fashion themselves the pure and ethereal bedies in which they are clothed when they visit the THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

Henry Peterson, Editor.

PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, MAY 26, 1860.

TERMS, PREMIUMS, &c.

The Terms of THE POST are $0 a year, if paid The remains 1750 and its advance. If The Plant Rank advance #8, if not paid its advance. If The Plant Rank a scheenighten must always be paid in abvance. For $8, IN ADVANCE, one copy is sent three years. We continue the following low Terms to Club :-One Copy, and nove Engravings of Ningara Palis, One Copy of THE Poor and one of

Arkhar's Home Magazine,
One Copp of Tun Poet and one of Godes's Lady's Hook,
Two Copies of Tun Poet,
Feet (and one engraving of Nisagars Falls) $6,00

Right '' (and one paper to getter up of Club.) 10,00

Talzreem (and one paper to getter up of Club.) 11,00

Twensty (and one paper to getter up of Club.) 12,00

Thirty (and one paper of club.) 12,00

Thirty (and one paper sizes, end both

Those who send clubs of eight, thirteen ames, can have oother an extra paper, as

A Beautiful Premium also to Every Subscriber

A Seautiful Fremium also to Every Subacriber.
"THE SPEAKING LIKENESS," a large and beautiful steel engraving, will be sent to Evany subscriber to
THE Port for 1989, who incloses us 2 cents.
Personne reciding in SELTISES NORTH AMERICA most rounit TWENTY-FIVE CENTS in addition to he United States postage.

ADDITIONS TO CLUBS.—Any person having son ADDITIONS TO CLUBE.—Any person having sent the money and names for a Club, may add new name to it at the same rate, provided the latter will allow their subscriptions to end at the same time those of the main last de. We will supply the back numbers if we have these. Our object is to have all the subscriptions in each Clubesd at the same time, and thus prevent confusion. The money for Clube must always be sent in advance. When the sum is large, a draft should be procured, possible—the sent of which may be deducted from the amount. Address: BEACON & PETERSON, No. 13P South Tri of St., Palladelphia. REJECTED COMMUNICATIONS.—We cannot undertain to return reverted communications. If the arti-

"DANESBURY HOUSE."

We have the pleasure of laying before our readers this week, the commencement of another fine story from Mrs. Wood, the author of The Earl's Daughters," &c.

It is the story which recently took the Prize f one hundred pounds, offered by the Directors of the Scottish Temperance League. The Committee of Award was composed of the following gentlemen:—The Rev. J. Massan, Dundee, the Rev. N. L. Walker, Dysart, and the Rev. A. Hannay, Dundee—and their decision was unanimously in favor of Mrs. Wood's

If this prise effort of Mrs. Wood's were merely an ultra Temperance story, we might consider it perhaps rather out of place in THE Poer. But it is not. It may be correctly called a temperate Temperance story—and a good deal besides. We must confess that we think certain moral relative to ill-consider marriages, is almost as prominent in the story as the Temperance moral. And the latter, which commended the story to the Scottish League, is so judiciously urged, -and the tersible arile of intemperate habits in man and woman so forcibly illustrated, and so gently and charitably dealt with-that we think the story will be warmly received even by such of our readers as feel no especial sympathy with the organised Temperance movements of the

As to the general power and interest of DANBSBURY HOUSE," it is enough to say to the readers of THE Post that it is worthy of their favorite author-while the gentle and loving spirit of the Christian lady irradiates even the gloom of the story, with the faith that overcomes the world, and the hope that survives bevond the tomb

AARON BURR

We have received the following from a co spondent, who signs himself "Justice"

respondent, who signs himself "Justice":—

Mr. Editor:—In your paper of May 12th there is a piece communicated by a lady. It is headed "Aaron Burr," and has the following sentence in it:—"My father used to say that Burr's killing Hauniton was the least of his crimes." Now, Mr. Editor, there was no more sin on Burr's part, in this duel, than on Hamilton's; indeed it may fairly be said Ha milton's attacks on Burr, both in speaking and in writing, were of a nature that no man of proper spirit could avoid noticing. Burr had great, very great provocation, and any one may see, by reading the correspondence bemay s tween them, that an opportunity was given to Hamilton for explanation

Great as Burr's faults were, much injustice on many points has been done him. With regard to the deed which Hamilton's conduct certainly brought about, the entire odium, even in this, has falten on Burr. Hamilton was a man of genius-but he was no Saint.

There is more of our correspondent's article but the above is enough to show its tone and drift. In answer we may be allowed to say, that of all the cant of the day, we think the cant of instice to Burr, started by Mr. Parton in his recent biography, is about the most contemptible. If we cannot trust the verdict of a pub lie man's contemporaries, including his own political party, upon his character as a moral and truthful man, what can we trust?

Hamilton "was no saint"-who ever tended that he was? But he did not make intrigue and seduction the business of his lifeand giery in the number of women whom he had betrayed and ruined. His contemporaries did not censure Burr for not being a saintbut because he was a kind of Satan.

As to the duel between Hamilton and Burr Hamilton was wrong only in allowing himself to be forced, from a false sentiment of into a contest which his conscience and indement disapproved. It was the great error of his life-and fatally he answered for it.

Burr was a public man, and, as such, his character for truth and honesty was fairly open to criticism. Hamilton, believing Burr to be a reckless and unscrupulous man, was bound to express his judgment to that effect to his friends; and was not the least culpable in doing so. Of course Hamilton, when interd by Burr, sould not deny that he conred him a bad man; but, as the cor shows, he went as far to avoid a per- her last week in this city.

sonal conflict, in the way of explanation, as he possibly could go, considering what he really believed Burr to be. Depend upon it, the "entire odium" of this duel which fell upon Burr, was simply owing to the fact that he deserved it all. For Hamilton, being a Federal let, was very unpopular with the Republican party of that day, and they would have dirided the adium between the two if there had been fair grounds for it.

But Burr's conduct in relation to the Republican party, to which he belonged,-the great opposing party to the Federalists was of itself sufficient to blacken his memory through all American history. As "Justice" ought to know, Mr. Jefferson was nominated by the Republican party for President, Mr. Burr for Vice President. By the Constitution, as it then stood, the person having the great set number of electoral votes was to be Presient, the person having the next highest number, Vice President. By a mistake of the Re publican electors, instead of sending on their ist to the Senate with Payr's name below that of Jefferson's, they gave the two an equal number of votes—thus compelling the House of Representatives to choose between the four candidates for President and Vice President, which should be the President

Now what was the part of a decently her able man in Burr's situation? Why, simply to inform the House of Representatives that as the whole difficulty resulted from an error, he must withdraw his name from before ody as a candidate for the Presidency. If he had done so, the House would at once have elected Mr. Jefferson President, while Surr, coording to the Constitution, having then the highest number of votes, would have been intention of his party, and of those who voted

But Mr. Burr did not do this. If he did not eretly intrigue with the Pederalists, he allowed himself to be used by them as a candidate against Mr. Jefferson; and this unfair contest was so long protracted, as our readers know, that the very existence of the government was menaced. Supposing any candidate for the Vice Presidency now-a days, should take advantage of some error in the figures to thrust aside the candidate of his own party for the Presidency, and seek to assume what would be thought of him? Why the howl of execration at such meanness, both friend and foe, would appel him. And it would be political death to any party now-adays, that should seek to avail itself of such contemptible treason.

Is not this one conspicuous fact of Agree Burr's career, sufficient, of itself, for tice," or any other honorable man? Is it no enough that Burr was thus a traiter to his own friends, to warrant the universal oding in which he was and is held? We think so.

RAPID DECAY OF IRON.

The cast iron pipes laid by the Water Com canies in the streets of London, have been decoying very rapidly of late-strange as ! may sound—changing into a soft and brittle substance like black lead. Pipes which ough to last mearly a century, now last, in certain situations, barely ten years, which adds, of course, greatly to the expenses of the compa-nies in the first place, and the price of water in the second. As this rapid decay generally has taken place in situe has taken place in situations where the iron pipes have been exposed to the leakage from djacent gas pipes, the water companies turally have accused the gas of working the mischief. To this the gas companies replied, very satisfactorily, as they thought, that their own pipes did not decay, and they were from

In a recent report, however, made by Mr Phomas Spencer, an eminent chemist, to the New River Water Company, it is shown, by a series of carefully-conducted experiments, that though coal-gas, when properly purified, has no direct effect upon iron, yet, when allowed to come into contact with sulphate of lime, (known, under the name of gypsum, as a con-stant component of the earth in the London streets,) sulphur is liberated in sufficient quanties to convert the iron into plumbago.

Mr. Spencer further states, that in Man hester the joints of the gas mains are made almost perfectly tight by the adoption of joints ocurately ground together like the stopper in a glass bottle; and, by the general adoption of this plan in London, he believes that the de struction of the water-pipes would altogether cease as soon as the amount of gas at present existing in the soil had expended its powers.

We allude to this matter, because there is gas in the streets of our American cities and, in sections where sulphate of lime shounds. the same rapid decay of the iron water pipes may take place as is experienced in London. We would also call the attention of the numeous gas companies to the new mode of join ing the pipes, and thus saving gas, now prac-

THANKS TO A RAILROAD OFFWER -Some time ince, the citizens of Chestinit Hill held a meeting and appointed Meesrs. M. Russell hayer and Charles Piatt a committee to convey to H. E. Smith, Esq., superintendent of the l'hitadelphia, termaniowa and Norristowr Railroad, a resolution thanking him for the prompt and friendly manner in which he has exercised his influence to promote the wishes and convenience of the residents of Chestma Hill, in the arrangement of the trains for

The public will be pleased to hear that the railroad above mentioned has got a superin-tendent. It was the general impression that the management of the road, except the taking of the fares, was left to Providence in a general way-for the business is managed as things left to Providence usually are. It would not take two men to convey to Mr. Smith all the "thanks" that could be raked up at German-

PROGRESS OF THE AGE .-- In the "first circles no one speaks of perspiring any more; what was once called "sweating," and recently "perspiring," is now the "suffering a dimin ion of the tissues by evaporation.'

Dollis Derros .- All ye who have not see the Queen of the Fairies, do not forget this is THE LAST HUMBUG.

The only request yet understood to be by the Japanese envoys is, that they she spared the embraces of the Cousinon Cous New York, whose reputation is well known

The above proves the Japanese to be se mon. Their high opinion of Philadelphia is also in their favor. And yet we think all this extra "fuss" that has been made with them to arrant none

Just to think of the Congress of the United States adjourning to witness the landing of a lot of semi-civilized Japanese! Could anything be less dignified, more ridiculous?

What's Japan to us, or we to the Japane Very little! The trade with Japan will not pay the expense of entertaining these ambe ers in twenty years. And what if it would? They will not trade, except they find it to their interest—they know grough for that—and they will trade, if they find it ways them so to do. They brought over some $50,000 to pay their own expenses—as the ambassadors of other nations pay theirs—but Congress chose to play

Well, there is no use in opposing a humbug while it is in full blast-rather and let loose the purse-strings of the city and the nation. We only wish, though, that these who eat the good things had to pay for the ners. But no matter, this hum soon be played out-and then we shall have another. Will not some one trot out a deputa from Siam, or the Cannibal Islands? latter we might kill a few of our leading politicians for an appropriate feed-which be a good thing all round.

LIBUTERANT A. W. HABERSHAH. -- Our old see it stated, has resigned from the Navy, and is now living at Yokuhama, Japan ; being engaged in mercantile business in parts with Mr. Stearne, a gentleman from Hone

We wish the Lieutenant-we suppose "sees lieutenant, always a lientenant"-all success inhis mercantile pursuits. Uncle Sam loses an able officer and honest man-but then Commerce gains what the Navy loses. We give our right hand to Habersham, over half this contemptible little globe.

THE AMERICAN SCHOOL UNION .- At a secent meeting of the managers of this institu tion, Mr. Waldron J. Cheyney was reinstated in his old office of Treasurer, and Mr. John S. Hart elected Recording Secretary, in the place of Mr. F. A. Packard.

We observe that the N. Y. Atlas copies the story of "HAUNTED, OR THE THING WHEN," from our columns without credit. Will the Atlas please "make its soknowledgments" for ten columns of excellent reading matter?

THE ORGANS OF MASTICATION.

PREPARED FOR THE SAPURDAY STREET POST, BY DR. JESSE W. CORNELIUS.

The teeth, the prime organs of musticaion, are the hardest portions of the body. They occupy the alveolar cavities of both the upper and lower jaw. A tooth is composed of ar distinct substances. 1st. The pulp, eecupying the chamber in the crown and canal ding through the root; 2d. The der which constitutes the principal part of the organ; 3d. The enamel, which forms the covering of and protection of the crown; 4th. The cementum, which covers the root. The teeth of first dentition, termed the milk or ten porary, are designed merely to supply the wants of childhood. They are twenty ber, ten in each iaw, namely: four incisors two cuspidati, and four molars. These are replaced with a larger and more numerous set called permanent. These teeth are intended to continue through life. There are thirty-two teeth in the permanent set, being an increase of twelve over the temporary teeth. sixteen to each jaw; four incisors, two cuspids, four bicuspids. Six molars to each jaw-The last molar is called the Wisdom tooth and generally appears between the ages of six teen and twenty-five. The anatomi sions of a tooth are: 1st. The crown, or exposed part, situated above the gum : root, occupying the alveolar eavity, or socket 3d. The neck, which is the constricted part be tween the crown and root. The pulp is an closed in the centre of the tooth, and is the first developed part of the organ, and the part from which the dentine is formed. It is an little doubt that there is no small escape of exquisitely sensitive, highly vascular and ner your substance, and is of a reddish gray color-The dentine is a very hard, dense substa constituting the inner and large portion of the crown and nearly the whole of the root of the tooth. It consists of earthy saits and animal matter. Dentine is harder than bone or comentum, but less dense than enamel. enamel covers the crown, and extends to the neck of the tooth. It is the hardest of all and mai substances; it is pearly white, or alightly tinged with yellow, according to the texture the tooth; it is harder on some teeth than others. The cementum covers the root, com mencing where the enamel terminates, and gradually increases in thickness to its apex. On the permanent teeth the cement is made thicker than on the temporary, and it is thicked on the teeth of old persons than of the young-The teeth are confined in their sockets by union called Gomphosis, from the resembla of this kind of articulation to the way in which a nail is received into a board.. There are fee operations in surgery that excite stronger ings of dread than the extraction of a tooth; yet when the operation is performed by a skillful hand, and suitable instrument, the opera-tion is always safe, and may be effected with in mar un ed Rr see less wil ch to the pa of wh hee good ten

app

ed

tuan come be ti all t

most

who in E

favor

wit, their all w

Cour

Was

draps head, of di

over long raids (dang sonifi mond powd-quisit with satin of litt

Codarvilla, Illinois.

28 A DISAPPOINTED TRAVELLER. -- AR AMS rican traveller in Italy, stopping at Genca very naturally visited the house where Columbus was born. In writing home, he regretted that he did not see that illustrious persons wished to thank him for discovering the country of which he had the henor

LETTER FROM PARIS.

WANTED POR THE SATURDAY STREETS POST

Panu, April 25, 1860. The magnificent hotel erected in the Champs Elysson, a few years since, by the Spanish Duke d'Albe, husband of the sister of the Empress Engenie, contains some of the finest reception-rooms in Paris; and as Masked and Fancy Balls are still the rage here, the Empress—whose love of brilliant shows amounts almost to a mania, determined, a few weeks ago, to give an entertainment of that kind in her sister's unoccupied palace. The death of the Grand Duchess of Baden, and one or two other short Court-mournings, conspelled her to postpone the project, and it was accordingly deferred until the night before last, when it came off with the utmost color, having really been one of the most superb, as well as the most admirably organised fetes ever yet beheld ll this of a

Any-

their

ather

y and or the

TO AB-

or the r old

ng on-

Mong

once a see an

de bet

ill the

a" for

ION.

body.

of the 1; 4th.

ly the rty-two

10 cas

divi-

or en

socket;

is es

he pari

nd ner-

y colorof the animal or se-

to the

dightly

cture of han on es, and a aper.

thicker

young-ts by a mbiance

n which are few

per feel-tooth; a skill-

on, very dumbus ted that so, as he the fine

Nights.

Prince Napoleon and Princess Ciotilda gave a very beautiful fete a couple of months ago, at their Herculanean villa, in the Avenue Montaigne, a gem of a palace, imitated with the most literal fidelity from one of the most beautiful buildings now rescued from the tomb of lava in which the two famous towns of Na-

"RE-OPERING OF THE THEATER OF HERCULANEUM. AFTER A SUSPENSION OF 800 YEARS!"

The play was acted by the first theatrical performers of Paris, the decorations and dress being magnificent. The whole affair was very nt, and was considered as the most successful entertainment of the season. But the Empress's fetc at the Hotel d'Albe has effectually "taken the shine out" of even that classical show-off.

tations had been in a state of great excitement for the last few weeks. The grand affair of the costumes has kept Parisian tradespeople busy all that time, and a few of the articles bespoken for the occasion, and exposed for a few hours in the shop-windows, have been duly stared at by the loungers, whose fortunes would not take nem ofherwise into the precincts of the fete.

The Count Tascher de la Pagerie, Intendant of the Empress's household, with his wife. were deputed by her Majesty to do the honors of the occasion, and they appear to have dis-charged the flattering but somewhat onerous duties of this delegation to the admiration of all concerned. The guests began to arrive about nine o'clook, and before ten the rooms— superbly decorated and lighted—were filled. The Emperor made his appearance, wearing only a black domine, about eleven; and the limpress, also wearing a domine, arrived soon after, attended by Prince de Metternich, the new Austrian Ambassador. It had been universally understood that the fair Eugenie would appear as the Huntress Diana; and much irreverent joking had been indulged in by the "public" as to the probable length of the geddess's tunic. Her Majesty, however, wore outy an elegant evening dress, and did not even remove her domino during the short time she remained. The Emperor kept his or also, even at supper, only exchanging the black one for a blue one, which must have presented an appearance anything than Imperial. It is said that the Empress is far from well, which is scarcely to be wondered at, seewell, which is scarcely to be wondered at, seeing that when quite a girl she adopted the monstrous habit of wearing a corset at night, and literally sever sleeps without this most unhealthy appendage! This fact I have learned from her stay-maker, a grand lady of the Rue de la Paix, who hardly cares to give herself the trouble to make a corset for anything less exalted than a Marquise or a Countest, and who, a few days ago, proudly described the chef d'auvres of "night-oersets" she supplies to her Majosty, which she declares to be "no thicker than a cherry-skin, or a sheet of Daper.

The dresses of the guests appear by all accounts to have been something stupendous. Princess Clotiida were an exquisite costume of a Shepherdess, of the time of Louis XV., while Princess Mathilde-renowned equally for ber beauty (now somewhat on the wane), her good humor, and her utter absence of all preasion to delicacy, or even modesty, astounded even the very liberal-minded Parisians by appearing in the very picturesque attire of a North American squaw, composed principally in the "Memoirs taken from the Archives of a few feathers, and her own fair skin, paintof a few feathers, and her own fair skin, painted for the nonce of a dark copper-color, apolo-gies for the nonce of a dark copper-color, apolo-gies for drapery of any other kind being both after the romantically magnificent details of the grand doings and seeings at the Hotel where the bird may have been brought up, and the prove that chicory has a specifically injurious.

The Police," by M. Peuchet, so romantically has caught; but, determining to make the best of it, put on a very innecent look, and only one public bath of this kind in London, eye, but, as he phrases it, from a feeling of the grand doings and seeings at the Hotel where the bird may have been brought up, and the prove that chicory has a specifically injurious. gies for drapery of any other kind tening tens, after the grand doings and seeings at the grand doings are grand doings and seeings at the grand doings are grand doings and seeings at the grand doings are grand sen of their wearer altogether. all the dancers in the third being ladies, the favorite personages of the Italian Carnival, to her of a liver complaint. their companions; the third in which the Four (daughter of the late Emperor of Russia,) per-

Earth was represented by Princese Swis-kowska, whose head-dress was a crenelated tower in gold, ornamented on one side with a coroncopia, from which fell fruit and flowers, all formed of the most magnificent jewels. Princese Cartoriaks, daughter of Queen Chris-tina, represented Fire; she wore a diadem of flames of gold, set with rubies, her hair being powdered with gold, and flames of the same metal being intermingled with her hair; her shoes were of cloth of gold, with golden wings set with rubies. Countess de Persigny, Mme. Nicrabite waka, Mile. Sivewiboft, Princess de magnificence of their costume, that a univer-sal request was made for a repetition of the dance; a request which was of course accoded to.

At two e'clock, the curtain which hung be-At two o'clock, the curtain which hung be-tween the pillars of the gardon corridor was raised, and a magnifoent sight was seen—a sort of fairy picture almost dazzled the eyes of the beholders. The corridor, with long galleries put up for the occasion, was converted into a banqueting-hall, decorated with such art to of lava in which the two famous towns of Naples have been buried so long. Among other features of the fete was the representation of an ancient play; the play-bills, which were printed on white satin in letters of gold, were headed

hanqueting-hall, decorated with such art to represent a landscape that it was difficult not believe it real, melting away into a levely fauture of the fete was the representation of an ancient play; the play-bills, which were printed on white satin in letters of gold, were headed Areadian plain, bounded by distant hills. In the foreground was a fountain of real water, on which an electric light was thrown so skill-fully as to give to the showers of spray, as they rose and fell, the appearance of frosted silver, the effect of which all present declare to have been marvellously beautiful. The centre of this hall was reached by two wide stair-cases; and twenty tables, loaded with the most sumptuous viands in plate and crystal, were laid ont therein. In order that this supper might be enjoyed without the presence of laqueys, the sole attendants, as I learn from one of the guests, were a body of youthful pages, the sons of the guests, attired in the costume of royal pages of the 16th century, moving masses of silk, lace, and velvet. A hand of musicians, also gorgeously attired, played during the supper.

The Negeon will make the presence of laqueys and the supper.

The King having spoken of the affair to his ring the supper.

The Emperor, still masked, sat down at one of the tables, with eight of the court-ladies or the table, which earlies that supped, an-other took their places, until all had appeared the "cravings of nature." After supper, the danoing was renewed, and the guests did not retire until six o'clock in the morning. Both the Imperial giver of the fete, and her guests, seem to have been utterly regardless of exmillion of france, while the display of dia-monds and other jewels is said to have been something wonderful, and the dresses excessively coetly—were got up with the utmost fidelity and entire oblivion of cost. The whole city was ransacked for the turquoises and rabies that figured in the elemental quadrille, the ladies who were them having bought, begged, and borrowed in every direction, the stock to be found among the jewelers being inadequate to this extensive demand. Among the meet spiendid and correct of the male costumes agured those of three English officers—Captain Lumley as Earl of Essex; Colonel Barnaby as Gustavus Adolphus; and Captain Maxse as Francis I!

A wenderful acoustic telegraph, by means of which the possibility of causing music, speech, or any other sound, produced at a given spet, to be heard at any other point of the earth's surface to which the telegraphic wires can be carried, has just been brought before the Academy of Sciences by the Abbe Laborde. One can hardly help wishing that some equally ingenious telescopic contrivance could enable all who care for brilliant spectacles, all the world over, to have taken a glimpse of the splendors of the gay fetc in question, as, by this new acoustic contrivance, it really seems possible that the whole population of the earth might be enabled—by grouping themselves in the Music-Hall of each town or village (of the Future!) to hear a concert performed at Paris, London, or at any other point of the indefinite number of centres from which the electric wires shall run out. But all this is more probably to be realized by our "great-grand nephews," as the French say, than by ourselves; but how, after re-counting the splendor of the Empress's fete, can my goose-quill condescend to rein in its flight, and come down to the topics of the everyday present? Luckily for the said goose-

It seems to be fully substantiated, then, that concerted the three quadrilles which proved to caused at Paris by the disappearance of not playment by the completion of railroads. be the most attractive feature of the evening; fewer than twenty-six young men, from seventeen to twenty-five years of age, belonging to first of these were represented the personages among the people that they had been decoyed who agure in the immortal history of "Puss and killed by a foreign Princess, in order that oots;" the second was composed of the she might take baths of their blood to cure

wit, Punckinello, Harlequin, and the rest of The King at length reproached M. de la Reynie, and insisted on the affair being cleared up. Riements were personified, was pronounced by De la Reynie consulted M. Lecoq, one of his French writer asserts that the city of London all who saw it to be the most lovely spectacle chief agents, and the latter at once suspected is enveloped in fog the whole year round. This that was ever presented in any ball-room. The that a woman must be at the bottom of it. is absurd. It is only foggy there six months-Counters Walewski represented Water; she He therefore employed an illegitimate son of the rest of the year it rains .- Exchange. was dressed in long, flowing, transparent his, called Exupere, to help him to obtain a was dressed in long, flowing, transparent his, called Exupere, to neiphing to draw a great drapery of gause, a coronet of diamonds on her clue to the mystery. Exupere, who was remove that virtue dwell in her heart his jury, said: "Now, gentlemen, you are to cured by this sweating system. of diamonds and opals, and behind, drooping himself splendidly, to assume all the airs of a that modesty play on her brow—that sweets One day, while thus loitering through the the tops of the funnels of steam vessels, does shape of a bowle-knife." sonified Air. She wore a head-dress of dia-fashionable promonades, he saw a woman of not extend down the funnel. It is caused by monds, with wings at the sides, her hair marvellous beauty, richly dressed, attended by the combustion of carbonic oxyd, which can powdered with silver, and a pair of ex- an old woman. Garing on the beauty with ad- only burn by meeting fresh air at the top of quisitely-contrived allver wings, thickly set with turquoises, on her shoulders; her blue fair stranger was not loath to make acquaint-satin shoes were also surmounted with a pair and before long the attendant tively low temperature.

l'Auxerrois that night at nine o'clock, sh would meet him, and take him to her mis

The young man went to his father and told set with rables. Countess de Persigny, Rime.

Niccabito rocks, Mile. Sivewibofi, Princess de Motternich, Countess de Labedoyses, and others, figured in these quadrilles. The Eismental one was composed entirely of ladies, four for each element, each four being dressed alike, except that the display of jewels was more brilliant with some than with others.

Such was the beauty of the dancers, and the bandage his eyes, which he refused to allow her to do. She then led him through several the first through several the first through several through the several through through the several through through the several through through the several through through the several through the several through throu shacure streets, till they entered the Rue de-Orfevres, where she introduced him into a Orievres, where she introduced him into a small house near the Chapel of St. Uloi. After walking along a dark corridor, the young man was introduced into a sumptuously furnished apartment, where he found the beautiful stranger, who received him with so many blandish ments that he quite forgot to give the signa agreed on to Lecoq, who was waiting outside with his men. Presently, however, the lady with his men. Presently, newever, the say retired, and the young man, proceeding to exa-mine the room, found, behind a soreen, a glass case, in which were twenty-six men's heads, each placed in a silver dish, and so skillfully way.

The King having spoken of the affair to his brother, to the Chevalier de Lorraine, and to some other high personages, the Chevalier sug-gested to the Prince that it would be amusing to sup with so singular a criminal. "Men sieur," as he was called, at first refused, bu at last consented. By means of a blank lettre de cacket, he caused her to be given up to some persons sent by him, on the pretext that she was to be conducted to another prison, and he pense; the ornamentation of the rooms, the supper, &c., cost not much less than half a his, where he, the Chevalier, and M. d'Ufflat were waiting to receive her. The whole four supped together, and Monsieur, who had seen enough of her, suggested that she ought to be sent back to the Bastille; but his companions insisted that she should be conveyed either to London or Brussels, and there set at liberty. The good-natured Prince consented, and went away. The two nobles passed the night in an orgic with the woman, telling her they would convey her out of the country next day; but she preferred to save herself rather than to trust to them, and having piled them with drink until they were overcome, she looked them into the room, slipped out of the house, and was never seen again. The Governor the Bastille, on learning that she had been King's brother, and fearing to let this fact be known, thought it most predent to pretend that she was dead, and he had a proces verbal drawn up to that effect, and entered on the register of the Bastille. This horrible story, which appears to be perfectly historical, has just been converted inte a drama; and in this form, with the hereine of the story a good deal whitewashed, and few gratuitous touches of additional horror skillfully thrown in, is drawing crowds of delighted spectators. QUANTUM.

> A NEW song should be sweetly sung, It goes but to the ear;
> A new song should be sweetly sung, For it touches no one near; lut an old song may be roughly sung.

The ear forgets its art, s comes upon the rudest tongue The tribute to the heart. A new song should be sweetly sung

It brings not back the strain that rung Through childhood's sunny cot , But an old song way be roughly sung. It tells of days of glee, When the boy to his mother clung. Or danced on his father's knee.

ly" to be heard swearing.

Capital to the amount of more than Conspicuous among the really beautiful costumes, were the fair dames who had previously under Louis XIV., a great sensation was the northern lakes, mostly thrown out of em-ger Way Nor !- A mother writes us that her little girl, seeing her father tap maple most beautiful of the present Court. In the poble or wealthy families. A report got spread trees, asked-" Why not tap the apple trees to get cider !" That would only be acting like a great many people who, in their haste to arrive at coveted results, are perpetually attempting to anticipate the processes of Nature. BE CANDID. - We detest sweeping asser tions, which are generally unjust. A recent satin shoes were also surmounted with a pair ance with him; and before long the attendant of little silver wings, also set with turquoises. accested him, told him that her mistress was a that is the most shabby fellow.

THE SISTERS.

Two sisters sit by the ember-Watching the fire burn low It is of me they are thinking In their hearts, I know.

And scarce a word is spoken. As side by side they sit; And if they speak, there is little Of what they think in it.

For they love me, both, past telling And that they think upon. Pity they both should love me,

Love is a blessing, surely; It should make us glad: Pity, with se much loving, Three should be so sad. The little heart is breaking To lean upon my breast: fibe is but a child, the youngest

But if she love me strongly. She cannot bear to see The life of her sweet sister

I love the eldest best

She, with her noble nature Hver in fear am I Lost she should formke me, That the other may not die.

Nene can love like we do : We win out of it

For I cannot speak of loving, Or look her in the face, And if the child die sudden

And only leave us two; And learn to love in Heaven Siehen and die quite rudden

And lie in winding sheet; And I to the grave, chief mourner How should I make the living

Ever be comforted, If for her the sister Lie with homeless head ? Nover the light shine on me If I know what to do. This is a sad affair, love :

-Chambers's Edinburgh Journal

Our boarding-house lady's daughter teaches the youth of our public primary, and is the cracle of our establishment on all knotty us. "What does the 'Octoroon' mean?" queried a verdant boarder. Anna was about in an instant, and after stretching her fore-head, answered: "Outo-eight; room-nig-gers; eight niggers. My good gracious, what a name for a play!"

a name for a play!"

Lunatics live proberbially to a good old age, and one of the proverbe, upon which the fact is founded, is, we suppose, the old household truism, that "Cracked vessels last the There are refined kinds of sentiments

as there are of sugar; man, for instance, takes his in the lump—hard, though easily melted with a tear; but with a woman it is always very advanced age, a thoughtful walk through its streets is like a walk in a cemetery. A modern philosopher gives several potent reasons why a man should never marry for meney, but an old epigrammatist views the case very pleasantly on the other side " Whenever you marry," Crusus said.

For any wife may turn out ill, But gad ' the money never will." MOTTO FOR A "KISS."-Go it, my two

To prevent the smell of cooking in a house, have nothing for breakfast, and warm it over for dinner and supper.

A witty young rascal, passing through the town of ———, in Alabama, not long since, wanted some whiskey, and knowing it could only be obtained by a physician, wrote himself an order, signing it with his own name, to which a learned M. D. was attached. He pre-sented it at the drug-store of a gentleman, who, though unrecognized by him, proved to who, though unrecognized by him, proved to be an old acquaintance. "Hallo, Frank," different parts of Ireland, and the directors of the infirmary of Newcastle-on-Tyne added one that of the infirmary of Newcastle-on-Tyne added one to their establishment with the best possible of their house surgeon results, as the report of their house surgeon read—not from an outward irritation of the ge A wise man will desire no more than cheerfully, and leave contentedly dredth. A splendid ear but a very poor voice, as the organ-grinder said of the donkey. BATISFACTION, -An English missionary, lancholy satisfaction of examining the oven in which his predecessor was baked." A day or two since a man rushed fran-commit suicide by drowning, but noticing a raries, while a medical gentleman in the So drowning was postponed for fear the coat would determine whether the deceased came to his over her shoulders from her back hair, were bounders from her bounders from her back hair hair hair hair hai > Red haired men ought to make the best locks on their shoulders.

"Vice and folly may feel the edge of wit, but virtue la invulnerable; aquafortis dis solves the base metals, but has no power to dissolve or corrode gold.

THE TURKISH AIR BATH.

PROM THE "LONDON PINED,"

Rvery one who has had to do with the bringing either man or horse into perfect condition knows that the critical part of the process is so to apportion the sweats that the fat and soft os may be removed, and yet that the stamina of the patient may not be unduly taxed or over-fatigued by the means adopted times or over-stagues by the manner of the produce the perspiration. This result has at last been obtained by the reintroduction to this country of the method which was in practice amongst the athlete of Greece and Rome, which is still used by North American Indians, which is still used by North American Indians, which is a household institution to this day among Bastern nations, and which eighteen hundred years age was perfectly familiar to the inhabitants of Britain, as the remains of Roman baths cisarly demonstrate. The leading points of the precess may be stated as follows:

1st. That by the application of het, dry air the man or horse is sweated without the incombrance of heavy extra clothing. cumbrance of heavy extra clothing.

2d. That he is thus sweated while at rest,

2d. That he is thus sweated while at rest, and that therefore the danger attending an over-action of the heart is avoided.

3d. That he is awested whilst naked, and that therefore by the admission of air to the pores he is cleansing the system from within, and also engaged in purifying the blood from

A word or two descriptive of these baths will not be thrown away before giving the physio-logical rationals of their use. In 1856, Mr. David Urquhart, fermerly secre-

In 1856, Mr. David Urquhart, formerly secretary of embassy at Constantinople, and M. P. for Stafford, (a gentleman who is known to be the greatest living authority on the manners and habits of the Rast,) happened to be staying at the water-ours establishment of Dr. Barter, near Cork. He convinced that gentleman of the superiority of the Kastern bath as a means of medical treatment over the process of Vincent Prefamits—the end in both cases being the same, namely, the relief of the system to be obtained by profuse paranization. But the the same, namely, the relief of the system to be obtained by profuse perspiration. But the cold water applications throw the heavy labor of reaction on structures diseased or weakened, whilst the direct application of heat relieve the patient at once and without undue effort; and at Dr. Barter's request Mr. Urquhart gave the design and superintended the construction of a design and superintended the construction of a bath as at present in use in Turkey. This bath consists of four rooms—the Vestia-rium, Tepidarium, Sudaterium, and Frigidarium of the Romans; or dressing-room, warm room, hot-room, and cooling-room. In the first the visitor is entirely undressed; then, girt with a towel about the loins, he is conducted into a mall chamber, heated to about 1000 Fahrenheit, where he remains until the skin is in a warm glow and a gentle moisture appears on it. He then passes into a larger room, with flues passing under the floor and round the walls, and connected with a central stove with-out the apartment, here heated to a degree usually about 1400 Fahrenheit, but higher in case of necessity. In this chamber the meis-ture on his skin soon increases to a stream, gushing through the eight millions of pores and the twenty-fice miles of capillary tubes which Dr. Rrasmus Wilson informs us our bodies are encompassed with, washing away every impurity, and fitting these tubes and pores for the subsequent reception of oxygen in the cooling-room. The bather passes into that chamber, after having had his body manipulated by an attendant, so as to remove that effete dead skin which forms daily on the body of every one of us, and after having gradually dried his limbs and stopped the perspiration in the warm-room. In the cooling-room (which is open to every breath of air, no matter what the season) every pore is doing its office—that of diminishing the labor of the lungs. The oxygen of the atmospheric air, which is the vitalizing element of life, and which is ordinarily excluded by our clothes, is entering every tube and pore in the frame; while the whole body is in a genial glow, and, equally removed from languor and excitement, enjoying the highest pleasure the human frame can know—the sense of perfect health. In 1857, Mr. Urquhart constructed a small bath of a similar kind in Manchester, where two or three public ones have since been opened. Bradford, Leeds, Keighley, Sheffield, Huddersfield, Macclesfield, and many other taken by working men at their own expense, and all turning out to be most profitable specuassumed as a catchpenny title by the proprie affect upon the optic nerve. he may get justly, use soberly, distribute tors of many of the oid fashioned hot water baths. Very recently Messrs. Prince, of the The brain is the twenty-eighth of the Racket Club, in Hans place, have opened a oess of a gymnasium, or philisterium, in con-junction with the bath.

The pugillsts and pedestrians in the North ing to make believe that he is soler ! in Sumatra, wrote home that he had "the me- of England have not been slow to avail them- ridiculous the spectacle! And yet more ridicuselves of this unfatiguing yet effective mode of without some or other of those gentlemen in society. tically down to one of the wharves in New whose chailenges and engagements are record-Bedford, pulled off his coat, and was about to ed in the pages of one of our Sunday contempo-ends, seeing they grow upon the paim. person near by who was a most notorious thief, of Ireland has realized a handsome sum by in Fourth street, New York. His wife, who is formed us that nothing could exceed either sare." "You dying for my wife! Get out of the enjoyment of the animal, or the rapid im- my house, you scoundre!" and he had just troops, because they always carry their fire- provement of condition and wood, obtained raised his foot to kick the honest artisan into without the necessity of pounding the legs the street, as the lady made her appearance under heavy "sweaters."

subject, which has strangely been neglected by | the rod.

the press. We shall again return to the phy-siological points of it, and shall be hoppy to answer any inquiries on the subject. Mean-time we are happy to inform our Lemine readoes that they will shortly be able to judge for themselves, as a Turkish bath, on a new and extended scale, is in course of construction in any little political disagreement, such as here or in England would be a "dissolution of the Cabinet:"

HOW THE JAPANESE MANAGE A CABINET DIFFICULTY.

Laurence Oliphani's "Narrative of Leek Egin's Mission to China and Japan, in 1805— 8—9," shows how the menach and his Coun-cil of State comport themselves in the overe of any little political disagreement, such as here or in England would be a "dissolution of the Cabinet:

"There is a body of men who persons gent influence in the State; these are the princes of the blood. Should the Typeen and kin council differ upon any weighty matter of State Government, the question is referred for arbitration to a tribunal companed of three of these royal princes. Should they combine the opinion of the Council, the Typeen, to whom is denied the privilege of hara-kari, or the 'happy dispatch," has me alternative but to abdicate incentinently in favor of his necessitheir. Should, on the other hand, the umpires agree with their royal relative, which in all probability they de, unless public opinion is too strong against them, then the whole of the council are bound, without farther cormony, at once to dispatch themselves, in the happy manner peculiar to Japan, to those Blysian fields where they will probably become distinguished as canonized kamis, and the patron saints of many a Japanese household.—This notorious method of suicide, the only Japanese custom with which the western world has long been familiar, has of late years assumed a somewhat modified form, and no longer consists in that unpleasant process of abdomen-ripping, which must have been almost as disagreeable an operation to witmess as to perform. My friend Higuo-no-kami process of abdomen-ripping, which must have been almost as disagreeable an operation to witmess areaor, and made of steel of the highest temper. Now this knife is only used to make a slight incision, insignificant of the intention of the victim to put an end to himself. He has callected his wife and family to see how a here can die; his dearest friend, he who in our own country would have been his best man at his wedding, stands over him with a drawn sword, and when he commonces to make the aforesaid incision, the sword descends, and the head roils at the feet of his disconsolate aforesaid incision, the sword descends, and the head rolls at the feet of his disconsolate

THE WHEEL OF FORTUNE.

Only twenty years ago last November, Louis Napoleon left the St. Charles Hotel without paying his board bill. In the New Orleans Bee of November 20th, 1839, appeared the following account of the "noble Count's" departure from that city:

Count Louis Napoleou Bouaparte, whosearrival in this city was announced in several of the papers, has left New Orleans in high dudgeon, and for just reason. He was yesterday morning informed by the propristors of the sit. Charles Hotel, that it was customary for gentlemen travelling without baggage, (the Count was splendidly provided in that way for a man of his titular dimensions, to pay for their board in advance, whereupon the following dialogue transpired: Count—"My name is a sufficient guarantee for my bill."
Publican—"Your name, Count, is a very good name, but won't buy marketing."
Count—"Make out my bill."
Publican—"It shall be done."
The clerk thereupon presented the bill, made out in the name of the Count L. N.
Bonaparte.
"My name," said the Count, "is Louis Napoleon Bonaparte—I wish it so stated in fulf in the account."
A second bill was made out, and the entire name written out in fair, legible letters.
"My name is Count Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, Prince of Segoria, Kamschatka, and other dependencies—say so in the bill," responded the sprig of nobitity.
"I will not make out a third bill," said the clerk.
"Then I'll be d——d if I pay it," said his

"Then I'll be d——i if I pay it," said his excellency, and forthwith absquatulated.

REPRETS OF CHICORY UPON THE EVEN .-- It has towns in the North of England, followed the been observed in Vienna, that those employed lead, the baths being in most instances underbeen observed in Vienna, that those employed fections of the eyes; and J. W. Slater, in a lecture delivered at the Mechanic's Institution,

The richest endowments of the mind are temperance, prudence, and fortitude. Pruhuman body, but in a horse but the four-hun- very handsome and commodious one in con- dence is a universal virtue, which enters into nection with the club, realizing the Roman pro- the composition of all the rest; and where she go Have you ever seen a drunken man try lous still is the attempt of an ignerant and ill training. The bath at Sheffield is scarcely ever bred person to appear very wise and refined

One ought to have dates at one's finger

26 A SLIGHT MISTARE. -Mr. Harris resides constructing a loose box for horses, heated on an economical body, had sent a costly silk the same principle, and by buying up unsound gown to a French dyer. The dyer himself horses and selling them at a good profit when brought the dress home, and unluckily, as it happened, met the husband of the lady at the We are acquainted with a gentleman who door. "Is madam within?" asked the French-and set the matter to rights.

We have sometimes reproached ourselves for not before adverting to this very important struck by a lady's beauty; was advised to kiss.

THE THE SATTEDAY PURSIES POST. BY ANNA L. G.

I shoul with a smile upon my lip And a jost upon my tengue, And heally many an assembler votes In oilvery laughter rung.

And eyes were height, and hearts were light, Within that stately hall, And I was the gayest of the gay, ditualy, 'mid the laugh, the just

And the mesic's rising swell. A metense broke upon my ear

Like a selemn feneral knell My beart grow still with a sudden shock And a terrible four and dread were whispering "He is dood."

And I listened with dilated ever

Till I beard another my. " He died on the deek of a homoword bound. At the close of a summer day, And, pround to his dying lips, he hold Then came a city, and a stifled cry,

And some one caught my sinking form, And some, in terror-stricken topes Were murmuring, "She is dead ! For I lay like one in breathless trance But at that my spirit oried fieldy, "Oh, God! if it seem but so

If only I had died " Into my mortal frame the life Ethod slowly lack again, And I crushed with a neighty gasp and three, The tarrible cry of pain

And I know that ever more My heart ing under the cruel waves A thousand miles from shore!

stilled my nerves with an and light,
And my step was firm and light,
"has she beer I stilled my nerves with an iron will. As merry as to night !

In the song, the laugh and the joyous dance, Full well I played my part-But I felt the chill of the heavy waves That lay above my heart '

THE QUAKER PARTISANS. A STORY OF THE REVOLUTION.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST,

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE SCOUT."

(Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1860, by Deacon & Peterson, in the Clerk's Office of the District Court for the Eastern District of

CHAPTER XXII.

The door remained opened, no one, in the eneral consternation caused by this and ment, having thought of shurting it, and the oldiers stood abreast, between it and the two Rangers, with muskets presented and fixed

"You had better surrender quietly, gentle men : resistance will only involve bloodshed, which I would much rather spare these ladies the night of." Clayton had calmly folded his arms, while the other was speaking, and stood, with Mary close beside him, looking him straight in the eyes, with perfect calmness and self-posses-

The last word was on the officer's lips, when Harry, anddenly, without the elightest warn ing, sprang, with a loap like a panther's, right r the bayonet of one of the soldiers, driving his beels against the fellow's breast with tremendous force and felling him like an ox, and fore the others fully comprehended what had The officer uttered a suiden exclamation, rather more terse and emphatic than he was in the habit of using before ladies, while his men, recovering from their momentary astonishment, rushed through the door without waiting for

was through the door and into the street be-rders in the blind instinct of pursuit. At the same instant, while the officer's attenion was diverted, Clayton drew a pistol from his becom, cocked it, and laying his hand with a quiet, but firm gripe upon the officer's shoulheld the mussle within an inch of his face, and said, in that calm, grave tone of his that nothing ever disturbed,

"Thee labors under a mutake in calling me thy prisoner; I have no intention of being any prisoner; I don't wish to have bloodshed here any more than thee does, and thee will therefore see the wisdom of requiring thy men to behave civilly, and molest so one here. officer made an attempt to seize the handle, "if thee attempts to draw it or move away, or if and another, signagging along, thy men"-who had new returnedbeyond the door, thee will be carried home.

The officer did so, perferce, and the men stopped just within the door, while Clayton went on in the same cool, unimpassioned tone.

Did thee suppose I was weak enough to thrust my head into the lien's jaws without he ring the means at hand of breaking his teeth if he attempted to close them?"

"Indeed !" said the officer, "and pray, sir, what means may you have of breaking the tion's teeth, as you phrase it ?"

"I will show then," said Clayton, giving a low whistle. It was answered immediately soon as they came in sight of from the grounds in the rear of the house, and force drawn up to receive them. ent the tramp of feet was heard in the hall, and then, twenty of the Rangers th, poured into the parlor.

mything also they are dead men."

riginal position, about the moddle of the even though they were "Yankeen."
"Why, sir," said the marine, "do you s, the latter's hand still upon his shoulder, ad the cocked pistol, which had never waver. | mean to say that twenty dies of his Majesty's | their

had stationed themselves between the two men oldiers, who remained by the door, stood there with pistol is each hand, holding the must touching the bayonets of the "present-ed" muskets of the latter as they stood stolidly waiting for orders; the women, with the exception of Mary Wetherill and Sarah Wheeler, who kept their position near Clayton, were haddled in the corners, with their hands to their cars, waiting in terror for the explosion, which they thought, of course, was coming while the gray mottled cat, startled from he fire by the fall of the soldier whom Harry had kicked over, still stood upon the rug with her back and tail arched, spitting and swearing in foline language furiously

"Yes," said the officer, through his elenahed tooth, "I see; I surrender, sir-order arms"is his men, who obeyed the order with pardon able alacrity-" If it hadn't been for the moun tebank trick of your follower there," he added, giancing wrathfully at Harry, "there might have been a different tale."

Thee sees the odds against thee," said Clay

"Possibly," said Clayton; "but thee see thee was mistaken in calling us prisoners. now, I don't wish to be harsh with thee, and it thee will promise me upon thy honor that this family shall receive no farther molestation, after we leave. I will release thee and thy met as soon as we are clear of the city."

" Pil promise that very willingly," said the officer. "though I had no intention of molesting them at any rate."

They now prepared to take their departure. In the meantime, Sarah Wheeler had been undging and making faces at Mary, and pointing to the flag, which still lay upon the floor, but the latter shook her head.

"Well," said Barah at last, "if thee won't I will," and picking it up, she advanced with it towards Clayton, and handed it to him, saying, "now that thy little affair with these eds is satisfactorily settled, I'll tell thee why we wanted to see thee. We want thee to take this piece of 'fine clothes' as mother there calls it, to be the standard of thy troop, never to who made it."

Clayton took the flag, and was about to re ply, when she cut him short, "There, now! thee needn't make a speech about it : we know by heart what it would be proper to say."

Very well," said Clayton, "but will the allow me to give it in charge to my standard bearer now !"

"Br all means," said she : "who is he " "Here he stands," said Clayton, handing the flag to Harry.

'Thee will never disgrace it, I know," said Sarab, turning to Harry with a bright smile and a glance which brought the blood to his cheek, cool young gentleman as he was.

"I may die with it in my hand; it shall never leave me in any other way," said he briefly, folding it up and placing it in his

At this moment Frank, who, with his habitual caution, had been keeping a sharp look out on the river through the front windows, paying very little attention to this exceedingly informal flag presentation, came up to Clayton, and whispered in his ear,

"Marines puttin' off from one e' th' ships Be quick."

Clayton instantly put his men in motion. gave a single pressure of Mary's hand, placed his prisoners in front, and in another u the whole party had passed out at the back of the house, leaving the inmates in the utmost surprise at their sudden departure.

When fairly out, he stopped and said to the

"There is a party of marines coming from f, ht them if necessary, but I don't want to fight here; we can escape and carry thee and thy men with ne without diffenity; but I don't wish to leave the women alone to meet those who are coming. Will thee promise, as an officer and a gentleman, that thee will remain here till they come, and prevent any annoyane or insult to those in the house if I release thee

The officer hesitated a moment. 'If not," said Clayton, calmly, " remain and fight it out : but thee and all thy men will be the first victims, whoever else may fall; my object is to avoid strife and bloodshed here; thee may soud them after us

"I promise," said the officer, "with that understanding. Those in the house shall not be molested, but I shall lead the marines directly after you. I tell you candidly."

"There is at liberty." said Clayton, and leaving them to return into the house, he ved rapidly with his men across the grounds which opened upon Front Street, passed into Leave thy sword where it is," he added, as the the street, crossed it, passed through an alley which led off from it, thence through another reached the edge of Dock Croek, where he found the rest of the troop waiting impatiently for them, having become alarmed by their delay.

The bitter cold of the weather, as I said before, had almost emptied the streets of passengers, and, having nothing unusual about their dress, their arms being all carefully hidden beneath their coats, the Rangers had attracted very little attention from the few they met.

Mounting their horses at once, they form upon the bank of the creek, and awaited the approach of the marines. The latter, who had been tracking them faithfully, halted as soon as they came in sight of the powerful

I have no fight to describe in this instance There would have been, however, if the pepwith Frank and Harry among them, armed to pery old marine officer could have had his way; for with a force of twenty-five men, all " said Clayton ; "now order thy told, he at first "poch-poched" the sugge own their arms. If they stir for of the other officer, that it might not be altogether safe or prudent, with so small a force, The officer stood affest; it was quite an im. and on foot, to attack a body of eighty or ed in minety, admirably mounted, as they could see, they are? You must excuse me, etr, but I which had, in reality, only acted as a decay to can't conceive the possibility of such a thing "

"Those are not clodhoppers, as you call Before they had recovered from the momenthem sir," and the other, "but a band of tary surprise of the first deable veiley, which would stand no more chance than a handfull of chaff before a gale. Do you know that they are the men who stormed the evokant buttery Germantown, and tore the companies supporting it to fragments, as if a magazine had blown up among them! We will well if they will let us go back at all." do very

After some farther discussion, and a good eal of grambling on the part of the old marine, at the diagrams of his Majostv's troops turning their backs upon any number of re-

not interfering ; for Clayton did not wish to be troubled with prisoners he had no convenient cans of disposing of, and was very well satismight have been benmed in; so as soon as he naw the enemy fairly on their retrograde march, he put his troop in motion in the opcefte direction, and made his way as rapidly possible from the dangerous neighborhood.

As soon as they were in the open country, Harry raised the flag upon his carbine, securing it between the ramrod and the stock, for want of a better fligstaff, thus diverting the attention of a few of the men who were inclined to grumble at having been prevented from attacking the marines; which was Harry's principal reason for showing it at that time.

I cannot do justice to the rage of General Howe when he learned what a prise had been and all. There's half an army at Clayton. and the soul manner in within his grasp, which it had walked out of it again.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Month after month passed on. The British ere still in Philadelphia, leading the sober and reoral life which arrabes are accompanied to ead in a garrison town.

The American army still lay at Valley Forge, enduring, with stern patience, their unparalleled sufferings. Washington was occupying a little low browed room in old Isaac cits, the Quaker preacher's house, as his headquarters, with a hole cut under the window seat for a fire proof safe in which to keep his private papers. Old Baron Steuben was there, drilling the barefooted troops in the snow, cheerful and lively on the scanty fare in the luxury of which the officers shared as well as the men; so scanty that, as the old Haron afterwards told, his cook left him, saying, by way of justification, that "where he had nothing on which to display his art, it was of no consequence who turned the string" (of the spit)

rable and never-to be forgotter The m Battle of the Kege" had been fought and won by the persistent and stubborn gallantry of the fritish, who lined the wharves and kept up a fire upon every stick that foated past, throughout the whole of a January day. In the words of an old letter published in the American Museum of 1787, " Both officers and non exhibited unparalleled skill and prowes on the occasion, whilst the citizens stond gaping as rolemn witnesses of this dreadful scene. in truth, not a chip, stick, or drift-log passed by without experiencing the vigor of the Be tish arms. The action began about sunrise. and would have terminated in favor of the British by zoon, had not an old market woman, in crossing the river with provisions, unfortunately let a keg of butter fail overboard which, as it was then ebb tide, floated down to the field of battie. At night of this unex pected reinforcement of the enemy, the attack from the marine and land forces was beyond magination, and so continued until night losed the couffet. The robel kegs were either them have shown their heads since. It is said that his Excellency, Lord Howe, has dispatched a swift sailing packet with an acthis signal victory to the Court of Lon-In short, Monday, the - of January, will be memorable in history for the renown-

The Rangers still bovered around the city ounding on straggling videttes and foraging parties, and sending them home empty and disarmed, (for they never troubled themselves with prisoners,) or following them helter skelter up to the very lines of the enemy, drawing out the guards in bootless pursuit, carrying off their plunder under their very no bulating the city in disguise and picking up the bine fing, and followed by the whole reinformation of their plans, which they the diligently thwarted, and keeping the British constant fever of excitement with their mad pranks. But "the pitcher that goes often the well gots broken at last."

One afternoon, in March, Clayton's scouts brought in word that a strong party was out in the neighborhood of Frankford, coming towards the city, with a number of cattle which they had seized.

the head of Bettle's and Wetherill's divisions, and some others, amounting, altogether, to about sixty men. Coming up with the enemy in the Frankford road, about half a mile above the city, he attacked them. The latter, though fully as strong as his own party, immediately broke before the charge, and abandoning their booty, retreated in confusion towards the city. belering We herkl, with some half dosen men, to take charge of the cattle and drive the the rendezvous, he followed with the belance of his force in hot pursuit." The two parties rusted together pell mell down the road, when, as they entered a kind f defin, formed by a deep cut, hedged in by woods on each side, a shower of musket balls from the thick undergrowth of bushes on the edge of either steep bank, poured down upon the Rangers like a half-storm. At the came nstant Clayton saw that the road was blocked up in front by a solid body of intantry, oursainly not less than two hundred strong, which had opened its ranks to let the fugitives pass through, and then instantly closed

They were betrayed! Not, however, by

ed for a moment, still poking its muzzle within | picked men could be made to turn their backs | pected the presence of any strenger force than | an inch or two of his face; the Kangers, who | on that gang of clodhoppers, mounted though | the coort which had been first attacked, and | d lead them into the trap.

Before they had recovered from the mome picked men, against whom our small force had emptied nearly half the saddles in the Clayton's wound had spread through his own gratefully." troop, another stores of balls from the strong force in front, sweet through them

Realing under the deadly fire, their move they were crowded by the bodies of fallen men and horses, disordered by the frantic kicking of some of the latter, which lay wounded and outangled among the legs of their own horses, the surviving Rangers wavered for a moment, and seemed apon the point of breaking away in a besdioug panie.

ent. Bestered to order ols, the order was given to retreat.

It was only for a moment. Restered to order.

It was confusted in good order, the Rangers by the salm but powerful voice of Clayton and the fery orders of Bettle, the few remaining men backed their horses rapidly but steadily a few paces to clearer ground, wheeled anddenly, first to avoid a conflict in the city, where he Bring as they turned, and dashed up the read towards Frankford, scattering the foragers, who had taken advantage of the mon pance to steal around to their rear, like dead

Wetherill, wi h his half dozen men and the eattle, had not get more than a quarter of a mile sway, when the volleys were heard in quick succession.

He ordered a hait at once; for his practiced ear told him that the fire was too heavy for the party they had chased.

"They're in a trap," said he, "as sure as-Woodward, thee has the swiftest horse. for life, and bring up all the mon; M'Lane's

With these hurried words, Wetherill, leaving the cattle to take care of themselves, turned back towards the fight with his com panions, while Woodward, before his officer had more than half finished his order, was ning across the fields, over hedge, and ditch, and fence, his light-heeled mare clearng everything like a wild deer

When Clayton broke through those in his ear, a strong body of light horse dashed out of the woods on each side of the road, in pursuit. They kept to the fields, and continued the pursuit in this way, with the Hangers a little in advance, but exposed, thus, to a raking are from each side.

The latter pushed on, keeping up a sharp until the superior speed of their horses had put them sufficiently in advance, to give them room to turn off the road to the left, and gain the large open meadow which lay beside it, front of the body of horsemen on that side, and bringing them between them and the others.

Once on open ground, with room enough for the purpose, the Rangers scattered in their usual fashion when in conflict with a much superior force, thus separating and distracting their fire.

The two bodies of light horse had now united, and the Rangers still retreated, slowly, wheeling and circling in their hawk-like moveents, not widening the space between them and their enemies materially, but keeping nearly the same relative distance—about hundred yards-never offering for an instant a stationary mark to fire at, while nearly every ball from their carbines and pistols told on the solid column which was steadily pursu-

In the meantime, the commander of the in antry at the defile, who had seen the Rangers in action before, suspecting that they would take o the fields as soon as possible, and make for the Wissahickon, had taken advantage of a bend in the road—pushed as rapidly as pos sible through the wood, and nowemerged from it with his whole force, a little in advance of the Rangers, on their-flank, I was going to say; but they had no flank, properly speaking -but in a position which was parallel to ther general course.

wing their ranks, at a whistle from Clayton ban foned their wheeling movements, and all but Clayton and Bettle, who remained upright in their saddles, dropping by the sides of their horses as Harry had done when he escaped, darted forward in a straight line for a couple of hundred yards or so, until they had left this danger in their rear, also,

They received a volley from the whole line as they passed, but the Regulars fired high and no damage appeared to have been done.

As they slackened their pace again, a small flag appeared above a roll in the ground about a quarter of a mile off, and the next moment ry appeared on the crest of the maining force of the Rangers and M'Lane's men combined.

"There they come," said Bettle, turning to Clayton, beside whom he was riding, "now we'll-but what's the matter f" he exclaimed, interrupting himself in alarm, as he saw Clay ton's face ghastly pale, and his hand pressed against his side.

"I'm hit," said Claston; "badly, I fear; but don't tell the men.; I'll stay in the saddle He immediately started to intercept them, at as long as possible," and then added, in an undertone, as though speaking to himself-"Oh! Mary, Mary, this will be sad news for He spoke with difficulty, as if the effort gave him pain, and said no more. Once or twice he swayed slightly in his seat, but immediately recovered himself, and sat there sustained by the indomitable spirit within him, to all appearance the same calm, strong man he had always been.

By this time the others had come up and thrown themselves between the wreck of their companions and their pursuers, covering their retrest and holding the light horse at bay, the infantry having been left by this time at a dis. tance which removed all apprehension of danger from them

Calling Wetherill to take his place by Class ton's side, to be ready to support him if he grew too weak to keep his seat, Bettle spurred back to Captain M' Lane and told him the cir-

Who's with him?" said M Lana

"Tell him to take half a dosen men and get aible. I'll take care of these scaries gentlemen and the fight went on.

The Americans being now more nearly equal in armithers to the enemy, changed their taction, and forming in solld column, charged headlong upon them. By this time the fact of roop, and instead of dispiriting them, as he had feared, it had only set them mad with rage. Pressing forward in advance of the column, in ments hampered in the confined space in which spite of the efforts of Bettle and the other officers to rustrain them, they hurled themsolves upon the enemy with a reckless fury that no discipline sould withstand, driving back their front ranks upon those behind them, in a confused, huddled up mass, and disordering their whole celumn.

Before they could recover, M'Laze with his teadier force was upon them, pushing the advantage thus gained. Their ranks dis those savage Rangers in the midst of them fighting, men and horses, with the blind, reck less ferocity of wounded tigers, M'Lane's iron solumn pressing them steadily back, the infantry which bould have supported them, out of reach, they broke into a disorderly flight toward the main body. M' Lane's men stopped at once without pursuing, for to have followed them to the main body would have been running into the jaws of death, but the Rangers clung to them like leeches, paying no attention to their officers' repeated orders to halt, until Buttle seized the bridle of the foremost and backed his horse by main force upon the rest, with his sword point at the rider's throat.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The men in charge of Clayton, hurried to the endervous, Wetherill and another one suporting him in the saddle for the last half mile. When they reached the place, he dismounted, with their assistance, and walked between them into the house, where he at once lay own, oversome with weakness.

The rest of the force followed as rapidly as possible, after they had driven back the enemy and discipline had been restored among the half-demented Rangers.

There had been almost a mutiny among then sefore this could be done; and Barton had actually drawn the trigger of his pistol at the face of one of the men who attempted to force his way past him. Fortunately for the fellow, the pistol snapped; and brought to his sens by this sharp reminder, and by observing that Clayton opened his eyes again and looked Barton had re-corked it, he slunk hack to his place disobey my orders?" said Barton slowly and sternly: "for shame, men, shall it be said that Clayton's Rangers with all their discipline. broke into mutiny as soon as their Captain was

"But, Lieutenant," said another of the men, we only wanted to revenge the Captain, and all the Boys that were mardered by them cow

" By sacrificing the balance of the treep Do you know there are not less than three hundred infantry youder, and that another ninute would have brought you right among them? We have nothing to do with vengeance leave that where it belongs; to your Maker Back to your place and obey your orders, if you want to please the Captain.

being restored, the whole party Order narched together towards the Wissahickon. "How did you happen to come up so early? aid Bettle to Captain Milane, as they rode on gether. "Woodward certainly hadn't time to reach the creek and bring you from there, when u came up. "We were on the march." said M'Lane one of my scouts discovered the ambuscade, ad brought me word at once; and fearing you might fall into the trap, we pushed out imediately to support you; we heard the firing, and were coming up at full speed, when Woodward reached us, about half a mile from where we first came in sight." When they arrived at the rendezvous, they und Claytou lying upon a rude couch, with Wetherill standing beside him. He was quiet. and apparently free from suffering, but pale and

His eyes had been closed, but the noise of their arrival had roused him.

Turning his head towards the door as M'Lane and Bettle entered, with a calm, grave mile, he beckoned the latter to him. "the end has come; I shall never draw sword more. "Oh, yes you will, Captain Clayton," said M'Lane, cheerfully "wait till we get you into Frank and Harry." the city, where you can be properly cared for, month." Clayton shook his head with the same caim, grave smile.

"I'm going to send a flag to Howe, to ask leave to have you taken in; you.oan't have proper treatment here."

"It is useless," said Clayton, "I could not bear the journey, and I wish no better care than my own wounded men have had; let me most death where it has found me; among

"Would thee like to see Mary ?" whispered Wetherill, stooping over him. Clayton's eyes brightened.

'It is the dearest wish I have left," said he. but I must give it up." "No, thes shall see her," said Wetherill;

I'll bring her here to night." In a few minutes more, Watherill was on his ray to the city with a flag. After some delay, he was admitted within the lines, and con ducted to Howe's quarters, where he stated his The General gave him the order, remarking, "It is not the safest time for a lady to tre vel ; but if you choose to take the risk of falling in with any of the marauders who are prowling around the city, you can do so."

"We will have to take the risk," said Wetherill. " If your Excellency will allow me to accompany them with an escort," said an officer who was in the room, "I will esteem it a special and would be glad to do him this service, as Clayton away to the rendestrons as fast as pos- and his officers when a prisoner among them." ner," said Howe. "You have hunted him

Bettie hurried forward again to give the arder, | faithfully, very much against your will, as | opportunity to do him a favor.

'I thank your Excellency," said Captain Gardner, for it was our old acquain the spring, "it is a kindness I will remark so saying, he took Wetherill's arm, and they left the house, the British captain in his gay uniform arm-in-arm with the Quaker Lies. lenant in his sober drab suit.

In the course of half-an-hour me were on their way to the Wissahiskon, an the promised escort; Mary, her mother, and Sarah Wheeler, whom Mary had requested to accompany her, in Mrs. Wetherill's carriage, and Wetherill himself and Captain Gardn borneback riding beside it. They reached the place about midnight.

As they approached the door, it was opened from the inside by Bettle, who had heard them oming. Placing his finger on his lips, he led them quietly into the room where Clayton was lying with his eyes closed, breathing heavily.

"How does he seem ?" whispered Mrs. Wa He shook his head.

'Ho's sinking ; he line been sleeping a little it intervals until about half-an-hour ago, when stupor seemed to come over him-Gardner tomehed Bettle on the houlder : you; this gentleman, Mr. hawrence," beckinging to a gentleman in an army surgeon's uniform, who had come in with him, "is the surgeon of our regiment; I have brought him with us to see if anything con be done to mye

Captain Clayton. Bettle pressed the surgeon's hand silently, and led him to the rude couch on which the

He looked at him for a moment, felt Me pulse, applied his ear to his obest, and then turned to Bettle and Captain Gardner, whe were watching him with anxious faces, and shook his head gravely. "Nothing can save him," he whispered; "he is bleeding to death internally; is there-any wine or brandy at hand!"

"I have both in the carriage," said Mrs. Wetherill : "I will bring them in."

Pouring out a glass of brandy, the surgeon raised Clayton's head upon his arm, and applied it to his lips. Partially aroused by the motion, and the pungent smell of the brandy, lreamily around him. "Drink," said the surgeon

Clayton obeyed, mechanically, and in a me ent afterwards, revived by the powerful stimulant, vaised himself on his elbow, and looked around him again, still dreamily, but with more apparent consciousness than before-"Where's Mary?" said he; "I thought

Wetherill brought her here.' Bettle silently beckened to her, and she ame forward and knelt by her lover. "I am here, Elle," she said, as she bem over him, and, pushing back the damp looks from his forehead, kissed it tenderly. cared she that others were standing by? Se others was concerned, she and Clayton were the only occupants of that lonely house. She saw nothing but the pale face that was now resting against her breast; she felt nothing but the faint pressure of the hand in which her own was grasped; she heard nothing but the low murmur of his voice as he strove, forget ful as ever of himself, to console her and strengthen her to bear the great sorrow that had come upon her. "Has he a mother!" asked M'Lane, of Bettle, as they stood looking sadly at this spectacle. "No," said Bettle, "his parents are both dead : I am the only relative he has living, that I know of."

At this moment Mary pointed to the glass which was standing near, with a spoonful of brandy in it. It was handed to her, and she put it to his ips; he swallowed a little of it, and raising his head again, from Mary's breast, beckened the others to him. "I have not taken the sword for fame of glory," he said, as they gathered around him. but that I might do my duty; I have striven to do it faitufully, as I understood it. When I am dead, let me be buried by my father, if possible, without any show or parade, according to the custom of my people. Let such el my men as wish, or are permitted, attend, unarmed, and as private citizens. Call in

"I have sent for you, " continued Clayton, "to bid you farewell. We have fought our last battle together; and I want to leave you s last charge. Do not attempt-let no one atte to revenge my death. Tell the men so, and tell them to obey their officers as well as they have always obeyed me. These are their Cap tain's last orders. Farewell.' The two men each grasped their Captain's hand, with a silent pressure, and then walke

sadly away. Clayton ceased speaking, and his head sank back upon the pillow. He lay thus for se time, with his eyes closed, in silence, Mary still kaceling beside him, with his right hand clasped in both of hers, looking at the pale face in dumb tearless agony; while Sarah Wheeler bent over him, gently wining away the cold damps which gathered over the fere

Bettle stood close beside him, his arms looked tightly across his chest, and his features working convulsively as he watched the face of the surgeon, who, with one hand thrust into the breast of his coat, and the other of the dying man's wrist, stood watching his countenance with the calm gravity of his pro-

They remained thus for some minutes, when the surgeon, turning to Bettle, who was standing nearest him, said, in a low voice, "It is inhalations, which he who has seen never for kindness. I know Captain Clayton personally, gets; they grew fainter and fainter, and at last, Mary's face, which had been directed fixedly requital of the courtesy I received from him towards Ciayton's, dropped upon his breast the surgeon gently laid down the hand he beef, "You may do so if you wish, Captain Gard- and all that was left of Ritis Cayton lay the motionless and still. (CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

REVERIE.

FOR THE SATURDAY BYRRING POST. BY BLEANOR C. DONNELLY.

Of this delicious day-The book of my favorite author, From my hand has dropp'd away . And thre' the open window, I watch the daisied lea Shine in the light and ripple Like the tide of a foamy see. Softly the ivy twining

Captain niance of smember

irm, and in in his ker Lien-n, under her, and meted to carriage, rdner on opened ord them , he led ton was o, when

on the

's uni

'In the ht him to mere ilently,

d then

r, who

there

d Mrs.

by the l she looks

What

oce of

She

it the

that this ving,

ful of

ising oned

rivem

er, if still

rsei face face

ght

The wooden lattice o'er ... Sendeth a lace-like shadow To dance on the sunny floor And some small bird, low lying Among the asphodel, Is singing a silver carol, Whose measure suits me well Whose measure doth awaken The thought of the absent one-Who stands in a deep embrasure And watches the sky alone.

A light in his eye is shining, The rainbow light of tears-And his parted lips drink in the breath That is blown from the by-gone years Where the apple-blossoms sway— Tis a breath of the happy childhood time Grown dim and pase'd away !

Oh, when will the broken decades Of Life's frail resary— Be gathered up and united In their pristine unity?

Oh, when will the long gone vessels, Across the dark'ning main, Come back with their golden treasures, To their native port again

The song of the bird, low-lying, In stlence quivers out— And a pleasant wind up-rising, Doth sway the leaves about The dreamy thoughts and tender Go, spirit-like, from me-And the book of my favorite author Lies open upon my knee.

$500 PRIZE STORY.

DANESBURY HOUSE.

BY MRS. ELLEN WOOD. ACTION OF "THE KARL'S DAUGHTERS," RED COURT FARM," &c.

[We have received from our talented con tributor, Mrs. Wood, the following powerful and touching story—for which she was recent-ly unanimously awarded the Prize of £100, offered by the Directors of the Scottish Temperance League :-Ed. Sat. Eve. Post.]

CHAPTER I.

THE MISTARE. - THE DINNER-TABLE.

It was a winter's afternoon, cold and bright, and the large nursery window of Danesbury House looked out on an extensive and beautiful prospect. Seated at it, occupied in repairing some fine lace, was a smart young woman of twenty, an upper maid, sensible and sharp-look-ing, with quick, dark eyes, and a healthy color.

There's the baby, Glisson," she suddenly exclaimed, as a child's cry was heard from the Glisson, the person she addressed, was a woman of middle age, active and slender, the valued nurse in the Danesbury family. She was sitting in a low rocking-chair, right in front of the fire, nodding at intervals. She half opened her eyes and turned them 'on Jessy, with a what dull or stupid expression.

"Did you speak ?" she asked. "The baby, Glisson. Don't you hear him Glisson rose, and stepping into the night-nursery, brought forth little William Danesbury, a lovely child of nine months old. His cheeks were flushed to a crimson damask, his pretty month was like a rosebud, and his eyes were large and dark and brilliant. She sat down with him-on the low chair: he seemed comewhat fractious, as infants will be, on awaking from sleep, and Glisson laid him flat upon her knee and rocked the chair backwards and to sleep again!" exclaimed Jessy. "I'm "Oh, sir," she panted, "there has been a were at dinner !"

"The idea of your trying to hush the child wild, as Ralph had done.

"Mind your own business," cried Glisson. Jessy was one who rather liked to have the

"He wants amusing, nurse; he doesn't want more sleep: and I daresay he is hungry.'

Giisson made no reply. She had closed her eyes, perhaps with a view to finish her own dose, and was gently keeping the chair on the rock. The child, soothed to quiet, lay still. Jessy paused in her work, turned her head side ways, and kept her eyes fixed for the full space of a minute on Mrs. Gilsson.

Presently a fit of coughing took the haby. The nurse put him to sit up, and patted his back, but he coughed violently. He had had a bad cough for more than a week past, but it was getting better. Glisson rose and looked on the mantel piece for his cough mixture. She dren the previous day, to pay a visit to

What have you done with the baby's medieine ?" she exclaimed to Jessy.

"I have not done anything with it," was the reply. "I have not touched it."

You must have touched it, or else it would be here," sharply retorted Mrs. Glisson. 'I tell you I have not," answered Jessy. "Where did you put it when you had used it

"Where should I put it but in its place or the mantel piece! I gave him some last night when I undressed him, and I put the bottle Danesbury had been poisoned. back. Somebody has been here, meddling," ed the nurse in an angry tone; "but I'll find out who it was. I'll let the house know

She fiung off, not in the best of tempers, the child coughing in her

"Have you found it?" inquired Jessy, when she returned.

" Pound it? of course I have," replied the nurse. "There shall be a stir about this : how dare anybody come and carry off my nursory things? It was in Mrs. Danesbury's closet, put among the spirits of campher, and the magnesia, and the other bottles. They thought to play me a trick, I suppose, for the direction off: may be they'll get one play ed to them, in a way they won't like, befo the day's out. It's that impudent Sarah! She said, at dinner, she'd be up to pranks, now mistress was away." Mrs. Glisson poured mixture, and gave it to the child. Jessy, mean while, was thinking one bound cleared the space between the win-dow and the mantel-piece. Sure enough, there shape and size, small round bottles, each areas half full, with what, to appearance, might be taken for the same mixture. Jessy snatched and the quickest way of general travelling was stout. The circums bottle from her, uncorked it and by posting. A chaise was ordered from the "The circums bottle from her, uncorked it and by posting. A chaise was ordered from the "The circums areas bottle from her, uncorked it and by posting. A chaise was ordered from the "The circums areas areas areas are not common, and the quickest way of general travelling was stout."

"You are a fool for saying it," shrieked out Glisson, in her terror. "It can't be the landa-

Jessy knew that it was ; she rocognized it as that which was kept in Mrs. Danesbury's priwate closet. She laid her two hands upon the woman's shoulders, and hissed forth strange words, in her grief and excitement.

"You are not yourself, and you know it: you are not in a state clearly to distinguish one bottle from another.

There was not a moment to be lost. She left In the hall she encountered a man-servant, and Jessy laid hold of him, and dragged him towards the front door. The man thought she was wild. "The baby's dying, Ralph. Fly for Mr.

Pratt: don't let him lose an instant."

Ralph, after a prolonged stare of bewilder-ment, started off, down the steps. Jessy followed him, and was running in a different direc-tion, when a thought struck her, and she called again to the man.
"Tell him what it is, Ralph; it may save time. The baby has had a dose of laudanum given him, in mistake for his cough-mixture.

To the right, at a distance of nearly a quarter of a mile, rose the large and extensive buildings, known by the name of the Danesbury Works. Jessy gained the spot, flew through the outer grounds, the passages, and into the private room of her master. Mr. Danesbury, a tall man of commanding presence, with nobly intelligent features and carnest blue eyes, now some years past thirty, was standing by his fire, engaged with two gentlemen. To see one of his handmaids burst upon them in that unceremonious fashion astonished him considerably: he thought her off to sleep again!" exclaimed Jessy. "I'm "Oh, sir," she panted, "there has been a former, who was an em sure he has sleep long enough—all the time we said accident at home. Mrs. Glisson has made Danesbury, an elegant a mistake, and given the baby the wrong medicine.

"Wrong medicine!" uttered Mr. Danesbury.

'She missed his cough mixture, sir, and she found it, as she thought, in my mistress's closet, and she gave him a teaspoonful. It was not his mixture, but the laudanum.' Mr. Danesbury, with a word of apology to the gentlemen, hastened from the room.

"You should have sent for Mr. Pratt, Jessy." he next said. "I have, sir: I did not lose time; Ralph is gone for him." It was a deplorable accident, and it had happened at an unusually unfavorable moment, for Mrs. Danesbury was away from home. She had left Eastborough with her two eldest chil-

see one of the servants from Danesbury House | St. George, "you have not told me about the come along, without his hat, at the pace of a Tower. steam-engine, dart into Mr. Pratt's, and to see the two, for happily the surgeon was at home, go steaming back again, caused unheard of onsternation. People came out of their houses been learnt by the operatives ; little William Nothing but emetics could have any couneracting effect upon so young a child, and when he shall visit it." those Mr. Prait tried; but whether they would hind a child's toy.

Could Mrs. Glisson have overlooked the bottle? "go back to the factory and tell your uncle to prepare for an immediate journey to Loudon. After he is ready, he must come here to monive my instructions."

"Oh, nurse, what have you done?" she uttered. "Here's the baby's medicine behind round? How state the baby's medicine behind round roun "Mas he child dead? Coul! It be brought tered. "Here's the baby's medicine behind Miss Isabel's doll's house! What have you not answer one inquiry, until she had delivered the message to Mr. Harding, and when she did explain, it was very brief. A mistake gase from the bottle in Jessy's hand to the botround? How did it happen? But she would a beverage not frequently called for at Mr. not answer one inquiry, notil she had deliver- Serie's, and one of the servants had to go down the in her own. They were precisely similar in the said, and Mr. Pratt could give no opinion shape and size, small round bottles, each about yet, one way or the other.

"Mrs. Gliason, as true as that you are alive, Harding, equipped for the journey, was al-you have killed the baby! This is the lauda- ready there, had taken his orders from his naster, and was now standing on the steps outside, talking with Jessy in an under tone. As the chaise rattied up, and turned round, he got inside, and just at that moment Mr. Danesbury ame out again.

"Mind, Harding, how you break it to Mrs. Danesbury. Be as cautious as possible. Mr. tell ber.'

"I'll do it in the best way that ever I can, sir." he answered, the tears rising to his even

The chaise drove back at a swift pace, down the woman to her own reflections, to the two bottles, and the child, and tore down the stairs. intense delight of the inhabitants, ever rejoicing in excitement, who flocked to their doors and windows to gaze after it as it rolled past, and at Thomas Harding seated bolt upright in They would have guessed his errand, had its object not transpired.

Mr. Danesbury had turned into the house again, but Jessy stood and watched the chaise down the hill; through the town she lost sight of it, but speedily saw it again, ascending the opposite hill, for Kastborough, a very small own, deserving little more than the name of village, was situated in a valley. Jessy was the daughter of a farmer who had a large family. She had received a good plain educa-tion, was well-mannered and well conducted, and her friends had not thought it beneath them to accept a place for her as maid at Mrs. Danesbury's, to wait upon and walk out with the two eldest children; Jessy had, at first, somewhat rebelled at it, not having thought she should be "sent out to service." Thomas Harding's wife was her father's sister.

Whilst that chaise was nearing the end of litan locality where so many men of the law congregate. Mr. and Mrs. Serle were its own-ers, and sat at either end. By the side of the with beautifully refined features and dark eyes, was the sister of Mrs. Serle, and lived there because she had no other home. Next to Mrs. to Walter St. George, and both of them were sister. The children's dining at this late hour dinner, or when thirsty, let it have its was unusual; but they had been out with the they enjoyed amazingly the dining by candle light. "But, sir," suddenly cried Arthur Danes Eastborough was forthwith up in arms. To bury, leaning forward that he might see Mr Do you often go to it !" "Well; no, I don't," smiled Mr. St. George.

"But I will take you." Mrs. Daneebury laughed.

"Arthur has a book at home, describing to wonder, and ask each other what had oc- the glories and wonders of the Tower in days the children could sit at table, they have alcurred, and the news soon spread to them gone by," she said: "lions, giants, dwarfs, ways had a little sup of beer." from the works; for there Jeesy's errand had soldiers in armor, and scaffolds. He cannot

it might be better to send for his wife; whe, countenance. Pair, with a broad, white, in. Once let a child lose his liking for water, to go home.

whalever should be the issue, would be the careless and frollosome under-housemaid, should presume to meddle with anything belonging to the nurse and baby. All in a moment—she could not tell how or why—a doubt flashed over her.—

"Jessy," said Mr. Danesbury, to the girt, ger. A servant placed a glass of porter by "Jessy," said Mr. Danesbury, to the girt, ger. A servant placed a glass of porter by go back to the factory and tell your uncle his side, and recalled him to his dinner. "Oh, water for me, if you please," said the child. "Water, air !"

stairs for some. Matthew and Charlotte Serie had each their small silver mug of porter. Your children are not going to drink wa ter!" exclained Mrs. Serle, when she saw the water placed for them. "This cannot hurt them, Mrs. Danesbury ; it is only porter, not

"Thank you." replied Mrs. Danesbury, they never take anything but water.'

"You den't know what's good for them, I see," interposed Mr. Serle. But the subject dropped.

To be resumed, however, at dessert. In pouring out the port wine, Mr. Serle filled four glasses three parts full, and passed them to

"Oh! I beg your pardon for not speaking

"Not take wine! and not take beer!" uttored Mr. Serie; "why, do you intend to make little hermits of them? I can assure you these children, when they are indulged by dining with us, and on Sundays, look for their

"I never heard of such a thing as punishing children in that way," cried Miss St.

George.
"It is no punishment," was Mrs. Danesbury's reply. "They are not accustomed to it, and therefore do not wish for it." "All moonshine!" laughed Mr. Serle.

Drink it up, children."

"No; I must repeat that I prefer they should not," returned Mrs. Danesbury. Her manner and tone, though perfectly courteous and lady-like, were unmistakably deciaive, and no more was said. The little Series drank their wine, and when the children had eaten some pears and oranges, they were all despatched to the nursery to play.

"How can you force those nice children of yours to drink water?" began Mrs. Serle, turning to her guest. "Do you do it upon principle! as people say."

"I do it because I believe it to be good for them," was Mrs. Danesbury's answer.

"But you cannot possibly think that the its forty mile journey, a merry party had as-sembled round a well-lighted dinner table in a handsome house in Bedford Row, the metropo-dren have just taken, can have done them any

"Whether it has done them harm I cannot

"Even for their health's sake !" repeated thoughtful and expressive. Opposite to her, Mrs. Serie. "I scarcely follow you. There in a drab silk gown, sat Miss St. George, who is nothing also that could be benefitted by

"Yes," said Mrs. Danesbury, "their taste. Serie was a young man, Walter St. George; he We should be very cautious what tastes we was in Mr. Serle's office, and had been invited impart to, or cultivate in a child. A child can to dinner to meet Mrs. Danesbury; and the not dialike water naturally; it is its natural middle of the table was occupied by four chil- beverage, as, rely upon it, it was intended to dren, two little Serles, and Arthur and Isabel be the natural beverage of man. A child Danesbury. Mrs. Danesbury was first cousin should never be allowed to drink anything else (except at those seasons, tex and break more distantly related to Mrs. Serie and her fast, when milk is substituted;) whether at pointed drink-water. Confine a child's drink ladies, sight-seeing, and had lost their own dinner in the middle of the day. Of course, and grow up, loving the water. I believe that it is of the utmost importance that he should be allowed to do so.

"I don't see why."

"As soon as a child can sit down to table and eat dinner, how many parents give that child beer to drink with it! Take your own children, for example; have you assustomed them to drink water!"

"No," was Mrs. Serle's reply; "but then, London water is such wretched stuff. Sin-

"Just so," returned Mrs. Danesbury; "you separate those marvels from the present Tower debar your children from tasting water, and in by any process of reasoning whatever; so I a few years' time they will have lost their fear disappointment will be in store for him relish for it-if they have not done so siready. You impart to them a taste (a forced, acquired Mr. St. George could hardly take his eyes taste, mind!) for stronger beverage, and inthat nobely shall come into my nursery with swe him, could not yet be proved. Mr. Danesfrom the boy, who was still bending forward, impunity. Perhaps it's carried into matrees s bury, the first shock over, began to reflect that so remarkably intelligent did he think his naturally, after that, water appears insipid.

grown persons will say, joined in his words, and it illustrated her As our tastee are trained in shildhood, so will our after likings ba."

"That is chiefly it;

they must grow up fond of one or of the other. My objection to chil-dren's taking beer or wine would be less strong, could I make sure that they would always partake of them in strict moderation; but who can answer for the future ! I think," continued Mrs. Danesbury, smiling upon them pleasantly, but with deprecation, "though you must not take offence at my saying it, that when parents do not oblige their chil-dren to drink water as their common beverage, they are guilty of a positive sin."
"Oh, Mrs. Danesbury!"

"A sin against the child; and perhaps," she added, in a lower tone, "against God, who has sent him into the world to be trained to morality and goodness.

There was a pance. It was Mr. Serie who broke it. "Are these your own sentiments chiefly,

Mrs. Danesbury, or your husband's."
"They are mine. I believe my husband thinks with me, but his hands and head are so full of business that he gives but little heed to what he would call domestic points. He has entire confidence in my management."

"Well; it is hard upon the children." "Hard upon the children! how can you take up so mistaken an idea! It is quite the contrary. Had I said to my children at dinner, just now, take which you like best, beer or water, they would have chosen the water. Water, I say, assimilates itself naturally with a child's sooner, interrupted Mrs. Danesbury, "I did not observe. Arthur and Isabel do not take my children, who have never had any, and they would find it sait, bitter; disagreeable as a dose of medicine."

"But, Mrs. Danesbury, if you keep your children-let us say the boy-to water, so long as you have control over him, you cannot ex-pect that he will confine himself to water, when glasses of wine, filled 'up to the pretty,' as he becomes a man."

"I do not know that," she answered: "I trust to be able to implant in him other whole-some training, besides that of drinking water; I mean, touching his own responsibility of action. But, whether he shall confine himself to water or not, I shall have the comforting consciousness of knowing that I have done my duty by him, in bringing him up to like it. When Matthew and Arthur, your boy and she had acted in her sleep." mine, shall stand side by side in after years, the one loving water, the other despising it, the one regardless of stimulants, the o her craving for them, what will have made the difference, but the opposite mode in which they were reared? You do what you can to eradicate the reared! You do what you can to eradicate the natural liking for water implanted in the child, it not strike you as being very extraordinary. I do all I can to foster it. Helieve me, Mr. Serle, we should all do well to bring up our bildren to drink water." "Madam," interrupted a servant, entering to tell you something which Jessy montion the room and addressing Mrs. Danesbury, to my wife."

"there's a gentleman below, asking to see you." "A gentlemant" repeated Mrs. Danesbury in surprise, who had no friends in London, and thought the man must be mistaken. "For

"He asked for Mrs. Danesbury. He has a oungregate. Mr. and Mrs. Serie were its owners, and sat at either end. By the side of the former, who was an eminent solicitor, at Mrs. Danesbury, an elgant woman of thirty years, with heavilially reflect former and dark ends of the former and the solicitor, at Mrs. Danesbury, and shall remark from the should be able to reconcile herself to service, and how she liked her place: white top coat on. He said he came from that Glisson—"

Thomas Harding—

Thomas Harding—"

"Go on," interposed Mrs. Danesbury, its has a bern whether she should be able to reconcile herself to service, and how she liked her place: and it talking of her various duties, she said that Glisson—that Glisson—that Glisson—"

"Go on," interposed Mrs. Danesbury, won-

The words seemed to electrify Mrs. Danes. bury, and she turned pale as death, as she started from her seat. "What can be the matter!" she uttered. "Something must be amiss with my husband or child !"

She quitted the room, and hurried to the one | bury. where Thomas Harding had been shown. He stood in the middle of it, his hat in his hand. Mr. and Mrs. Serie caught a glimpee of a most respectable looking man, with grey hair and an bury, in the very extreme of surprise. onest countenance.

"Tell me the worst at once," breathed Mrs Danesbury. "Something is amiss with Mr. Danesbury! He has not been caught in the machinery ?" she gasped, the dreadful thought courring to her.

"Dear lady, pray don't alarm yourself; it's nothing so bad as that. Mr. Danesbury is quite well, and it was he sent me to you. Little Master William is poorly, and he thought you might like to know it "

Mrs. Danesbury sunk on a chair, inexpressibly relieved. "Sit down, Mr. Harding," aid : "what is the matter with him ?"

"Well, ma'am, it may sound awkward to you n teiling, but Mr. Pratt had little doubt he'd be all right," replied Toomas Harding improving upon the hint given him by Mr. Da bury, "and that was the last thing the master charged me to say to you. Mrs. Glason lost his cough mixture, and she found it, as she thought, and gave him some, but it turned out to be a bottle containing some tincture of is not likely to be deceived. She has seen Oliaopium. Mr. Pratt was there directly with his emetics, but the master bade me come up here and tell you, ma'am, thinking you might like ling of this misfertage to day, she teld me Otis through diseas, through accustoming him to drink an artificial here-rage, and you will make a mile him to drink an artificial here-rage, and you will make and perphased har apart from the make and him seems of the control of the co rage, and you will rarely find him regain it in after life. Many

"I posted up, ma'am, in one of the challes

"I posted up, ma'am, in one of the challes from the Ram. It is at the door," in the round not," in the rrup to d Mr. 28.

Guerga. "I never did drink it, and I am once I omid not begin now."

Mrs. Sorle were standing outside, not Exing to intrude, and searouty during to inquire what had happened. The burst into tears in the gave them the news.

"Going down at once?" uttoud Mr. Surle. "But how are you going?"

"Mr. Harding posted up. There is no difficulty."

culty."

She had been walking up the stairs in she replied, too annious to lose a moment. When the remarked: "you were not allowed to drink water when your tastes, for good or fer ill, were being formed.

As our tastes are trainculty."

won't be nice when you are gone. When shall you come back?"

"The n, it is not that you derive and wine, as that you will now a first shink so ill of heer and wine, as that you wish your children to grow up fond of water, "otherwell Mr. Serie.

"That is chiefly it;

"That is chiefly it;

the nurse to remamber, manua."

the kined him twenty times; she biased isabel, breathing a blessing on them both; she hade farewell to the rest. The two children ran down to chake hands with Thomas Harding, who was in the dining room with Mr. Serie, evallowing some hasty refreshment. The chains, with its fresh horses, drove to the deor, and Mrs. Danesbury entered it nearesty giving time for the step to be lowered. Thomas Harding prepared to mount to the seat in front; the dicky, as it was called in these days.

"No, no, Mr. Harding," interpo Danesbury, "you must not sit there this cold night. Come inside."
"Ma'am," he answered, in his respectful nodest way, hesitating to obey, "I feel that I should be intruding." "Not at all. Step in." And the chaise whirled from the door, and speedily left London behind it.

CHAPTER II.

THE RIGHT JOURNEY.

Mrs. Dansbury naturally felt impatient for particulars, and pressed Thomas Harding to relate them, as they sped on their way. He was enabled to do so, having had them detailed over to him at length, by Jessy. Mrs. Danesbury listened to the end, but she was not satis

The tincture of opium has been in the closes in my bedroom undisturbed since the night it was first brought into the house. I had the toothashe badly, and sent to the chemist's for some. Sarah went for it; and, knowing I was in pain, she brought it away without giving time to label it. I placed it in my closet, and how it is possible for Glisson to have gone thither for it, and taken it, believing it was the baby's cough mixture, which she kept in her own nursery, I cannot conceive. It is an understood thing in the house, that nobody in terferes with what may be in that closet but myself. I should not be so much surprised had it been one of the other servants; but for Olisson to go to the closet, and to commit such an error, is incomprehensible. It is as though

Thomas Harding was silent. He was debe ting a question with himself. Ought he to im-

" A faithful, cautious, tried old servant like Mr. Harding !"
"Ma'am," he said, with straightforward sim-plicity, "I am thinking whether I ought not

"If it is anything that can bear upon this case, you certainly must inform me," replied Mrs. Danesbury. "It was the Sunday Jessy had leave to drink tea with us," he resumed. "My wife got asking her whether she should be able to reconcile Go on," interposed Mrs. Danesbury, wondering at his hesitation.

Thomas Harding leaned towards Mrs. Danes bury, and continued in a whisper, "That Glisson drank." "That she -- what !" uttered Mrs. Da

"Ma'am, that Olisson dvank, Took some times more than was good for her. "That Glisson drank !" repeated Mrs. Danes possible. What could Jessy have meant by saying so.

"My wife said it was impossible, and took essie to task for traducing Mrs. Olisson. But Jessy persisted that it was so that she does drink, and is often stapid through it.

Mrs. Danesbury was silent, utterly confounded.

"Nearly every night she has one big tumbler of hot gin-and-water, sometimes more; bestdes, drinking plenty of ale at supper, too much, in fact; Mrs. Glisson being allowed the ale at that meal, while most of the other servan s take beer."

"Mrs. Glisson is older than most of them," interrupted Mrs. Danesbury. "And when Mr Danesbury suggested that Glisson might drink ale with her supper, if she pre'erred it to table beer, neither he nor I imagined she would take an unseemly quantity. It is incredible !"

"I fear it is true," returned Thomas Har-"Jeney is a clear sighted, keen girl, and son with a black bettle to her lips in the daytime, and believed it contained gin. In speakson was 'stupies' again, and it was in consequence

"But, were it true that Olisson takes gin how can it have escaped her detection ?" urged takes it in the day-time, and you don't see her, ma'ess, after she has hed it at night. But she has get a trick of anoking things. See it will be a bit of campbor, cometimes drop : Jossy says she always he permint drop: Jomy bays suppring, when she what the nume has been suppring, when she near her put one of these things into her mouth; me they take off the small of any ary remembered to have smell ermint and camphor when the nurse had talking; and she also remembered that on had countenally seemed stupid—be-ard—and she had wondered; but she had exted the cause now hinted at. "I Josey had said this to me," she observed. "I should not have quitted home and left the shild in her charge out," responded Thomas Harding. "But very m, going fresh into a house, would to bring such a charge against an old

"Very true. And my perfect confidence in Simon may have tended to blind me. The is, where can she get the gin !" 'Oh, ma'em, peeple who give way to drink never at a fault to get it.''

ad hersalf into her our nor of the chains, buried in an unpleasan reverie. She was casting biasse to herself. Not for having falled to detect Olisson's fault; no, having suffered the landanum bettle to be night of placing a label on it, but the time had gone on, and on, and this was the result. Had there been a label, Olisson was certainly not so far gone but she might have read it you, or Mrs. Harding, mentioned this doubt of Glisson to any one ?" suddenly asked

"Certainly not," was his reply. "And we cantioned Jessy not to let it escape her lips

I am glad of that. I scarcely see my way clear, with regard to Olisson. Mr. Danesbury thinks highly of her, and she served his faithfully for many years, so that I feel it would not be kind, or just, to turn ber away. as I might a less valued servant. I think I anat bury this in silence, even to Mr. Danes bury, and keep her on for a while, and be watchever her, and try to recall her to what she used to be. I am convinced she cannot have aken to it long. I must question Jossy : perhape she will tell me more than she has told

They had been travelling at a high rate of speed all the way, and had changed horses everal times, though it has not been necessary to mark their progress step by step. Now they were nearing Esstborough; and soon the lights in the town began to be visible. Had it been day, Mrs. Danesbury would have seen husband's factory, rising on the oppo hill. It was, however, nearly midnight, a cold, rosty starlight night. A steep hill desce to the hollow, and at the top of the hill was the turnpike gate.

The gate was closed. The post-boy stopped his horses and hallooed; and the door opened and the keeper came out. Mrs. Danesbury, who was on that side, leaned forward.

"Do you happen to know, Giles, whether eived no answer. The man had en forward, with a stumble, to open the gate sbury supposed he had tripped a stone. He opened the gate ; he did not fling it back, but kept it in his hand, and wen stumbling across the road with it. The postboy urged oh his horses; but Giles somehow ed his hold of the gate, and though he went on himself, he lot the gate swing-to again. It struck the nearest horse.

The boreo, a pasty tempered animal at all imes, as the post-boy phrased it afterwards, began to plunge and kick; that startled his boy, they sprang forwards, and dashed madly down the hill. Mrs. Danesbury shricked, and

Ma'am, ma'am, don't get up, don't lean out!" implored Thomas Harding; "be still, for the love of life! Lie you down at the bot-

"This is certain death." she walled. "They Mad it been his own wife, or one with whom he could put himself upon an equality, Thomas Harding would have forced her to the bottom of the chase and held her there. But he did sir," said the landlord of the Pig and Whistle, not like to act so to Mrs. Danesbury. She had who, with the others, had collected close up. leaned from the side window as the spoke the last words, probably not knowing that she did so, in her agitation and terror, and certainly not aware that they were already at the foot of crowding round. Mr. Danesbury, will you the hill. But they had, as it were, flown down it; the chase, in that same moment, struck you stay and hold the torch.' awkward bridge, (which every body in Eastorough had long said was a disgrace and a to the town, but which none had be stirred themselves to have altered) and the told too plainly its own tale. as overturned. Mrs. Danesbury's head fall on the ground, and the chaise settled upon

How Thomas Harding extrinsted himself he knew. Beyond being shaken and s little benised, he was not hurt. The terrified se had struggled and plunged till they elves, and started off with part of the broken shafts dangling after them. The comes Harding saw at a glance the dread-itination of Mrs. Danesbury. To raise the se, or aid her of himself, he was entirely At that me est twelve, and the deer of a public-the Pig and Whistle, beyond the m, and a size

ing towards them; " help her group, most of whom w D ury works, halted at the no setion it came. They had left m blasing with lights and fire, and could as yet distinguish no object outside. d followed with a candle ; perhaps believin it would render objects more distinct.

Blest, if it sin't Harding !" exclais "What's the motter, sir?" he eried, as his norman came panting up.

Mr. Harding explained, as well as he wi ble for his haste and agitation. Some we so who were, fiew with one accord to faring candle, which soon flared out.

"I telled ye I heer'd somm'at like horses a galloping past, with shafts a'ter 'em," oried me of the men; "but ye was in such haste to see the landlord, for saying it were twolve, that we could not beed me.

Between them they raised the chaise, austricated Mrs. Danesbury. She lay motio Harding, sheeked and bewildered, and hardly ing how to act, sped off through the tow to Mr. Danesbury's, whilst others ran for the surgeon, who was not found at he seebury House. The postboy had gathered himself up, and was sitting with his bac side of the bridge. They gently raised him, and walked him about a few steps. No limbs were broken. He shook himself, and speech came to him.

That there Olles ought to swing for this, were the first words that broke from him

What had Olles to do with it?" questi the chorus of volces.

"He were as drunk as blases. I saw he ere, when he came ducking, head over heels, to open the gate. He were so drunk he couldn't me swing agen the horses
"Did that start 'em off!"

"It just did start 'em off: I never strode such terrified, furious brutes afore. They took, you may say, one leap from the top of the hill to the bottom, not a bit longer it didn't m, and the chaine caught the nasty awk'ard bridge, and we went over."

"I tell you all what," cried the landlord; something 'll be done now. The tewn has called out long enough about the danger of keeping such a bridge; and some folks have called out about Giles's drunkenness. ?t'll both be remedied now; you'll see.'

"Who'll give me a arm up the hill?" cried and had driven out with Mr. Harding that afternoon, with these very horses. "I doubt if I ain't too shaky to get up it of myself. I'll go and have a word with Giles."

Two of them immediately took the postboy in tow, and they began to ascend the hill. The rest remained to keep watch ever the unfor tunate lady.

cried out the landlord, "what about the horses ! Where be they flown to !"

"Taint much matter where," was the post boy's answer, "they have done mischief enough. They be off to their stables, no doubt,

Arrived at the turnpike, they tried the house It was looked; but they shook it, and kicked, and shouted till Roger Giles came and opened it; very nearly pitching forward into their arms with the exertion.

"A nice state you be in!" uttered the postboy, "a sweet gentleman you be, to keep a pike! Do you know the damage you have

"Kh !" enunciated Giles. He was stunidly drank, and his eye wandered uneasily to the spot where he kept his employers' cash; some vague idea hammering at his brain, that the men, now entered, might have designs upon it.

postbey to his friends: "'tain't of no good. Look at the sot! But you'll both please to bear me out to my master, as to his state, so that I don't get the blame.

"This will be a bad job for you. Giles." cried one of the men. "You have took a drop much, my boy. Any way it will be bad, but if Mrs. Danesbury shouldn't be got to again (and she don't look like it), I should b sorry to stand in your shoes.

They descended the hill again, and the postboy sank down as before, with his back resting against the bridge. His exertion had made Soon, voices and rapid footsteps were heard, for several people were approaching. Poremost of them came Mr. Pratt, will be certain death. Oh, my children! My Saviour, I can but commend them to Thee! dark night, to Mr. Danesbury. Those keeping guard, drew respectfully saviour, I can but commend them to Thee! dark night, to Mr. Danesbury. There had the surgeon, Thomas Harding, and Mr. Daneshad been thought of by Thomas Harding, and the surgeon held it to the face of Mrs. Dancebury.

"She haven't stirred, nor even moaned, "A moment if you please," cried out the surgeon, authoritatively. "Stand back, all of you: I can do and see nothing, with you, also allow me a moment here alone. Harding, Poor Mr. Pratt! He saw that Mrs. Danes bury was dead, and had so spoken to gain time for composure, and that Mr. Danesbury might not see, unprepared, that ghastly face, which

All had stepped back in compliance with his rishes. Mr. Danesbury's eyes fell on the post-

Are you hurt, Jim !" he saked, kindly, "A bit shook, sir; I don't think it's no worse. I hope it won't be no worse with nobody else, sir," he added, nodding towards where the surgeon was stooping

"How did it happen? Mr. Harding says the gate touched the horses.

"Come swinging right agen 'em, sir; Giles ere so drunk he couldn't hold it back." "Drunk, was be !" quickly cried Mr. Dan

"He were beastly drunk, sir. I have b up there to him now, some of 'em here helped me, and he can't speak, nor stand streight."

Mr. Pratt had arisen, and was at Mr. Danes bury's elbow. He passed his arm within the gentleman's, and drew him away from the rd; halting at a certain part of the bridge, and appare

"What is it ?" said Mr. Danssbury, " why do you bring me hore? Have you assortals the nature of the injury?"
"Oh, my dear friend?" oried the surge

I know not how to tell you what I

Mr. Dancebury's heart sank within him; shadow of appailing wee stele over him. But he did not speak. Feehaps he could not. "I fear—I fear she is gone," added Mr. Pratt.

Then Mr. Danesbury cluiched the surp rm with a tight, nervous grasp.
"The truth," he breathed, "the truth. Let this agony of dread." She must have died instantaneously. Her neck is broken. Mr. Dancebury let fall the surgeon's an He half fell, half rested on the parapet of the bridge, and a low wail of utter angulah went forth on the night air. (TO BE CONTENUED.)

> BONG. Love me if I live ' Love me if I die What to me is life or death, So that thou be nigh?

Once I loved thee rich, Now I love thee poor Ah ' what is there I could not For thy sake endure

Pay me for my pain ! Come and murmur in my car How thou lov'st, again

THANKPULNESS .-- Many favors which God giveth us ravel out for want of he through our own unthankfulness; for though prayer purchaseth blessings, giving praise doth Fuller per It is just sixteen years since Pro-Morse put up the first Electric Telegraph in America. The first piece of news sent ever it was the nomination of James K. Polk for Pre alders made at Baltimore and annous Washington "two hours in advance of the

To keep eggs from spoiling, eat them shile they are fresh. Of all kinds of methods. this is the only one to be relied on "in any climate.

A word of kindness is seldom spoker in vain. It is a seed which, even when dropped by chance, springs up a sweet flower. Fast youths are now called young conemen of accelerated gait.

"How do you get that lovely perfume!" asked one young lady of another.
"It's scent to me," replied the other.

ser An eminent testotaller would only con nt to sit for his portrait on condition that he should be taken in water colors.

A civic youth, intending to offer marriage to a young lady, wrote to ask her to unite with himself in the formation of a 'Art

There is no greater sign of a mean and anything more magnificent than to lay them out freely in acts of bounty and liberality.

Denmark has 45 horses to every hundred inhabitants, which is more than any other European country. Great Britain and Ireland have 2,500,000 horses : France 3,000. 000; Austrian Empire, exclusively of Italy, 2,600,000; Russia, 3,500,000. The United States have 5,000,000 horses, which is more than any European country. The horses of the whole world are estimated at 57,420,000.

per It is a remark of Ainsworth's that a writer should place the lowest possible estimate upon his own productions, thereby preventing himself from feeling too strongly the mortification of a failure and enjoying with a keener

THEY say thine eyes, like sunny skies Thy chief attraction form I see no sunshine in those eyes.

SO A New Stepy .- Buckham officiated as Professor at the Teachers' Convention, and onvulsed the audience by relating an anedote. He said that at the first distri he ever taught, he announced one day that on the following Monday he would commence a parsing class. A bright-eved little girl, one mother's parlor, where a sewing society was in session, and, with uplifted hands, cried: "Oh, mother, Mr. Buckham is going to have a sparking-class !" The sewing society was delighted

The best fencer in Paris is a beautiful young lady of Polish origin, Madamoiselle Linewski. At a soirce at the house of an aristoeratic widow in the Fanbourg St. Honore; who it appears is fond of fencing, and has an apartment in her house, devoted to that sort of ex-of all the earthly music, that which reaches the farthest into heaven is the beating of a loving heart.

That plenty should produce either coretonsness or prodigality is a perversion of providence; and yet the generality of men are e worse for their riches.

My rule is, deliberately to consider, be re I commence, whether the thing is practicable. If it be not practicable I do not attemp it. If it be practicable I can accomplish it, if give sufficient pains to it; and having begun, I never stop till the thing is done. To this rule I owe all my success. - John Hunter.

In a letter from Lamb to Coloridos Search of a Wife," from a very neat, careful lady, and returned it with this stuff written on the fiv-leaf :-

"If ever I marry a wife, I'll marry a landlord's For then I may sit in the bar, and drink cold bear dy and water

A witty man can make a jest, a w

NOTES ON NURSING:

The Best Means of Preserving Health

BY PLORENCE NIGHTINGALE.

MUDICINE CANNOT CURR. It is often said by women, that they es ow anything of the laws of health, or what to do to preserve their children's health, because they can know nothing of " Pathology,"

"dissect."-a confusion of ide which it is hard to attempt to disentangle. Pathelogy teaches the harm that disease has Pathology teaches the harm that disease has done. But it teaches nothing more. We know nothing of the principle of health, the positive logy is the negative, excep on and experience. And nothing n and experience will teach us but observation and experience will teach t the ways to maintain or to bring back the sta of health. It is often thought that medicine is the curative process. It is no such thing; me-dicine is the surgery of functions, as surgery proper is that of limbe and organs. Neither an de anything but remove obetr neither can cure; nature alone cures. Surger; removes the bullet out of the limb, which is truction to cure, but nature heals the of an organ becomes obstructed; medicine, so far as we know, assists nature to remove the detruction, but does nothing more. And what nursing has to do in either case, is to put on him. Generally, just the contrary is lone. You think fresh air, and quiet and cleanliness extravagant, perhaps dangerous, luxuries, which should be given to the patient nly when quite convenient, and medicine the sine que non, the panacea. If I have succeeded in any measure in dis; e'ting this illusion, and in showing what true nursing is, and what it is not, my object will have been answered New for the caution

DISAPPOINTMENTS IN LOVE.

seems a commonly received idea amo en, and even among women themselves, that it requires nothing but a disappointment in ove, the want of an object, a general disgust, or incapacity for other things, to turn a woman into a good nurse.

This reminds one of the parish where a stunid old man was set to be schoolmaster besuse he was "keeping the pigs."

Apply the above receipt for making a good urse to making a good servant. And the reopt will be found to fail. Yet popular novelists of recent days have inladies disappointed in love or fresh out of the drawing room turning into the war-hospitals to find their wounded lovers, and when found, forthwith abondoning their sick-ward for their lover, as might be expected. Yet in the estimation of the authors, these ladies were none the worse for that, but on the contrary were heroines of nursing.

What cruel mistakes are sometimes made by benevolent men and women in matters of business about which they can know nothing and think they know a great deal.

The everyday management of a large ward, let alone of a hospital—the knowing what are the laws of life and death for men, and what the laws of health for wards-(and wards are healthy or unhealthy, mainly according to the knowledge or ignorance of the nurse)-are not these matters of sufficient importance and difficulty to require learning by experience and careful inquiry, just as much as any other art? They do not come by inspiration to the lady disappointed in love, nor to the poor work house drudge hard up for a livelihood.

And terrible is the injury which has followed

o the sick from such wild notions In this respect (and why is it so !), in Roman Catholic countries, both writers and workers are, in theory at least, far before ours. They would never think of such a beginning for a good working Superior or Sister of Charity. And many a Superior has refused to admit a Postulant who appeared to have no better "vocation" or reasons for offering herself than

"vow" necessary to convince us that the true spirit for learning any art, most especially an art of charity, aright, is not a disgust to every thing or something else! Do we really place the love of our kind (and of nursing, as one branch of it) so low as this? What would the Mere Angelique of Port Royal, what would our own Mrs. Fry have said to this

TWO JARGONS.

Nors .- I would earnestly ask my sisters to they are women, and should be "recalled to a | might well make the "best fellow" shudder. sense of their duty as women," and because "this is women's work," and "that is men's. and "these are things which women should not do." which is all assertion, and nothing more. Surely woman should bring the best she has, whatever that is, to the work of God's world, without attending to either of these printers. cries. For what are they, both of them, the one just as much as the other, but listening to dealer notes as among the "characters" at the "what people will say," to opinion, to the masquerade in that city—The Greek Slave! "voices from without" And as a wise man has said, no one has ever done anything great or useful by listening to the voices from with-You do not want the effect of your good things to be, "How wonderful for a nor would you be deterred from good things by hearing it said, "Yes, but she ought not to have done this, because it is not suitable for a woman." But you want to do the thing that is good, whether it is "suitable for a woman'

It does not make a thing good, that it is remarkable that a woman should have been able to do it. Neither does it make a thing bad. which would have been good had a man done it, that it has been done by a woman.

Oh, leave these jargons, and go your way (THE END.) straight to God's work, in simplicity

AMERICANS NEVER GROAN THE WAY TO TELL THE TIME OF NIGHT WHEN WOUNDED IN BATTLE.

net in the natural and moral history of the Anglo-American race—a fact demonstrated by a large amount of unimpeachable history. It hattle. Dr. R. was first informed of this singular trait by a major-general in the United States army, who had been in "sixty pitched iattles," (that is a large number-where were hey fought !- Ed. Post.) and who comme in several very important engagemental which he was uniformly victorious

This officer in giving a familiar detailed acone of those conflicts in which two housed five hundred Americans, many of them volunteers and militia, were victorious over four thousand British troops, including several regiments of veterans from Welling sveral regiments of veterans from versions on's Peninsular campaigns. The British made night attack. The Americans were prepared night attack. or them except in one point of their line where here was a partial surprise.

the extreme right, the enemy wer quickly overpowered," said the major-general. As soon as I heard the rapid volleys of nusketry, I galloped in the direction of the The night was very dark. I creams and groans, and immediately kner that the British were worsted."

This naturally suggested the inquiry, "What possible difference between the groams of the Britons and those of Americans

The major-general instantly replied, as half erprised that a familiar and well-established fact should be strange to others. "Oh! the Americans never groan when they are wounded." He added that, immediately after this success, his attention was called to another part by heavy firing, and as he galloped in that direction, there was no sound of cries of pain though he heard loud cheering which he knew to be from the enemy, because "the English had better lungs than the Americans," as he observed in answer to another question, and send from their chests a deeper and more sonormen had the worst of it, and were down. found that my orders had been disobeyed, and that, being surprised, that battalion had suetained heavy loss without returning the fire.

He said further that, having often noticed this national peculiarity, he had inquired of many officers who had commanded during the Revolutionary war, and their experience firmed and corresponded with his. They testified that in a night-skirmish, or assault, they could always judge which side was overpower ed by this indication.

Dr. Bacon subsequently made investigation as to the difference between different nations in the power of bearing pain or suppressing complaint under it. Dr. Valentine Mott and other eminent surgeons and physicians sustain Dr. Bacon on this point. The American (including even little children) bear surgical operations best—the Euglish next. The Irish and French, as a general rule, bear operation very badly. So do the Portuguese and Spaniards, under Dr. Bacon's own professio ervation and experience. The eminent American historian, Georg Bancroft, whose attention was called, a yea ago, to these observations of Dr. Bacon, was much interested in the statement, and pro-

Dr. Bacon philosophises upon this phenom on by referring to climatic influences in part for the cause. The aboriginal red inhabitants of this country are renowned for their mor than stoical endurance of pain under the wors of tortures. It is a trait that manifestly belongs to the soil. The violent extremes of heat and cold, the sudden changes, unparalleled in any other region, have an influen men born here to physical suffering, unknown changes from heat to cold, and from cold to heat

INFORMATION FOR "JOLLY FRILOWS,"-Ther is a tradition that brandy was at one time manufactured from the fruit of the vine; but the grapes of France having of late years folthe example of the potato, and taking to moulding and rotting, many of the French brandy makers have adopted bituminous coal as a substitute. They distil a potent spirit from this substance, which is thus made available for the production of two kinds of fire—one for the comfort of man, and the other for the destruction of his health, his senses, and his soul. keep clear of both the jargons now current | Large quantities of alcohol distilled from coal everywhere (for they are equally jargons); of and "dectored" with certain chemicals to give the jargon, namely, about the "rights" of it the "Cognac flavor," are now exported from women, which urges women to do all that men | France to this country. Coal brandy is the latest | the first, and he himself in the second war of do, including the medical and other profes- adaptation of the good gifts of Providence to independence, and that he would like to have sions, merely because men do it, and without the purposes of poison-mongers, that has come the name of the scoundrel who brought regard to whether this is the best that women to our knowledge. Coal tar has long been used can do; and of the jargon which urges women | for the flavoring of whiskeys, but a liquor with | against him?" to do nothing that men do, merely because a coal basis is a specimen of chemistry which

> A rabid antiquarian hearing that s raven would live two hundred years, bought one to try it.

> funny; they call female compositors "calico RATHER COOL .- The Cleveland Plain

20 Jones, who is a student of human nature, says that the restless ambition of woman is exemplified by the fact, that when she is won by her lover, and her lover is won by her. she is still dissatisfied until both are one in another sense

An elderly lady, who, with her daughter, has just returned from rather a rapid jour ney through England, France, part of Germany, and Italy, was asked, the other day, if they had visited Rome, and she replied in the negative. "La! ma, yes we did," said her da ter; that was the place where we bought the bad stockings." A Long RANGE. - A person more ingenious than scrupulous paid an account by a note at two months; but on presenting it at the end of that period, the helder found it was drawn payable two months after death, instead of great wisdom prick him with thy Spirit, and after date.

BY THE STARS.

With suitable instruments, the time can be secretained by the stars more accurately than It can in any other way; and it is easy to tall it approximately, say within half an hour, without any instruments whatever. Let us describe a simple, rough device for this pas-pose, as the easiest mode of explaining how it may be done by the unaided action of the eye and judgment.

Take a keg or barrel hoop, or hoop of wire. and divide it into twenty-four equal spaces, marking the dividing points for hour points. Connect the opposite hour points by lines of fine twine drawn across the diameter of the hoop. Hang the apparatus against a north window, and place the eye in a line with the middle of the hoop (where the wires cross each other), and the north star. Now any of the fixed stars, in its daily revolutions about the pole, will pass from one wire to the next in an hour. Let us select the nearest pointer in the 'dipper' (Alpha, Ursa Major) for the hand of our great clock of the heavens. Place the eye at such a distance from the apparatus as to bring this star just within the hoop, keep-ing the centre of the hoop in a line with the North Pole. On the 5th of March, the star Alpha, Ursa Major, will be on the meridian. lirectly over the north star, and, consequently, in line with the upper vertical wire of our ap-paratus at twelve o'cleck, midnight; and as it passes from one wire to the next in an hour, if it is seen in line with the first wire at the right of the vertical one, the time will be eleven o'clock; if in line with the second wire at the right, ten o'clock; and so on. While if it has passed the middle, and reached the first wire at the left, the time indicated is one o'clock; the second wire two o'clock; and so on.

This star, in common with all the other fixed stars, comes to the meridian about four minutes earlier each night or day than it did on the preceding night or day. Consequently, on the 5th of April it will reach the vertical wire at ten o'clock at night, and the other wires at corresponding times; and this variation continues at the rate of two hours in each month throughout the year.

From this description, the mode will be readily understood of telling the time of night by the stars without the aid of instruments. and that one of the pointers which is the pears one to it-te remember that this latter part is directly over the north star at midnight on the 5th of March, and comes to the meridian two hours earlier on the 5th of each month than it did on the preceding month. As the star re-volves around the circle in 34 hours, it will, of conres revolve one fourth the distance in & hours, being at right angles to the meridian 6 hours from the time it is on the meridian, and at an angle of 45 deg. three hours from that

The apparatus which we have described will e more accurate if the top is inclined forward from the perpendicular at an angle corresponding with the latitude of the place in which the server is located, bringing it perpendicular to the axis of the earth, and in a place parallel with the plane of the equator.

KNOWING TOO MUCH.

We find in one of the Memphis papers the following anecdote of a man who knew too much : During the administration of President Jackson, there was a singular young gentleman employed in the public service in Washington. His name was G .: he was from Tennessee, the son of a widow, a neighbor of the President, on which account the old here had a kind feeling for him, and always got him out of his difwith some of the higher officials, to whom his singular interferences were distaste

Among the other things, it is said of bim that while he was employed in the general Post Office, on one occasion he had to copy a letter of Major H., a high officer, in answer to an application from an old gentleman in Virginia es Pennsylvania, for the establishment of a new post office. The writer of the letter often used classical language; in this letter he said the application could not be granted, in consequence of the applicant's "proximity" to another office. When the letter came into G.'s hands to copy, being a great stickler for plainness, he altered "proximity" to "n Major H. observed it, and asked G. why he altered it. Why, replied G., because I den't think the man would understand what you mean by proximity. Well, said Major H. try him; put in the "proximity" again. In a few days a letter was received from the applicant, in which he very indignantly said 'That his father had fought for liberty in the charge of proximity or anything else wrong "There," said G., "did I no say so?" G. carried his improvements so far that Mr. Barry, the Postmaster General, said to him, "I do not want you here any longer; you know too much." Poor G. went out, but his old friend, the General, again got him another place. This time (i.'s ideas underwent The printing "craft" in Fall River are a change. He was one day very busy, when a stranger called in and asked him where the Patent Office was. "I don't know," said G. "Can you tell me where the Treasury Department is?" said the stranger. "No," said G. "Nor the President's House!" "No." The stranger finally asked him if he knew where the Capitol "Do you liv "No," replied G. was ! Washington, sir," said the strang sir," said G. "Good Lord! and don't know where the Patent Office, Treasury, President's House and Capitol are?" "Stranger," said G., "I was turned out of the Post-Office for knowing too much. I don't mean to offend in that way again. I am paid for keeping this I believe I know that much; but if you find me knowing anything more, you may take my head." "Good morning," said the

An old Scotch parson, praying after & flowery young brother had preached, said: "Lord bless thy young servant; and with thy HEWS ITEMS.

NIGHT

aly then y to tell in hour,

Let us

his pur-

g how i spaces, r points. lines of r of the a north with the one each y of the sout the ext in an paraina p, keep-the star

eridian, mently,

our ap-

he right

at the wire at er fixed ninutes

on the

on the corresrough vill be

f night

menta. de star

part is on the an two tar re-will, of e in 6

n that filw be orward spond-

ch the arallal

rs the w too

an em-

agton.

e, the

i feel-is difds, to nthat

Office,

ter of need

o an-

G. '8

dainwhy don't

. try

a the aght

said ger; but

AD-

went en a

the

nger nitol e im Yes,

now nt's said

for

i in t if the

17 &

The Dear Made to Hear.—A letter from Paris tells a strange story of a recent discovery in science, culminating in a melanchely denousment. A governoss in private families had under her charge a little Russian boy, who had been born deaf and dumb. The gentle disposition of the boy greatly endeared him to the governoss, who devoted much of her time to developing his intelligence, and enabling him to keep pace with her other pupils. After many sleepless nights, and many experiments, the lady finally resolved that sulphuric ether was the talisman to be employed in opening the the lady finally resolved that sulphuric ether was the talisman to be employed in opening the world to her peor little prisoner. Its application proved successful; numerous other experiments indicated that the grand secret had been discovered; the Monthyon Prize was awarded to the lady; and she rapidly rose from poverty and dependence to wealth and fame as a benefactor of her race. But, also the sudden transition was too much for a mind so long overburdened by study and devotion to a single object; the reason of the poor lady gave way, and she has since been conveyed, a hepeless maniac, to a maison de sante, at Montmartre.

Marire.

A Darine Information.—An extraordinary affair is related in the Russian journals. Prince Neevitaky was some years ago murdered by his servant, who possessed himself of his papers and fortune, and assuming the name of the Prince, travelled abroad for some years, living in good style. Afterward returning, he married a wealthy heiress named Sokoloff, and had by her several children. Recently, his imposture was discovered, and he has been sent to the mines of Siberia; but the Russian Government has authorized the children and the wife to continue to bear the name of Nesvitzky. This case is similar to one which occurred in France in the time of the Restoration. An escaped convict named Cogniard, possessed himself of the family papers of Count Pontia de Sainte-Helene, and by means of them not only assumed his name and title, but caused himself to presented at Court, and actually succeeded in obtaining the grade of Lieutenant-Colonel in the army. He was, however, after a while, discovered, and sent back to the bagne.

THE BOY CARRIED OVER NIAGARA FALLS.

reference to this accident, the account

The Boy Carrier Over NIADARA FALLS.—
In reference to this accident, the account of which we published a few days ago, the Thorold (C. W.) Gasette says:

"On Sunday, the 6th instant, Mrs. Macklem, widow of the late Pr. Macklem, of Chippewa, and her brother, Thomas C. Street, Req., accompanied by Mrs. Macklem's eldest boy, about eight years of age, were crossing the bridge to the beautiful little island below Mr. Street's residence, in the Niagara river, when the boy was walking behind his mother and uncle, and somehow slipped over the bridge into the river, and was instantly carried into the rapids over the Falls. He was not seen falling into the river, nor missed until another boy who was walking along the bank, seeing his hat floating on the surface, gave the alarm. The feelings of the mother and the uncle, under the severe stroke thus suddenly inflicted upon them, can be better imagined than deder the severe stroke thus suddenly inflicted upon them, can be better imagined than de-scribed. The child was not seen after he fell into the water, nor has any trace of the body been discovered since."

A SISGULAR CASE—The dead body found in the water at Jersey Ci y, said to be that of Mrs. Ada Richardson, must be that of some other person—as Mrs. Ada Richardson is now alive in New York. It is a rather remarkable circumstance that reveral of the prominent marks which were represented to be on Mrs. Richardson's face are not to be found now. Her ears are not siit, and there are no busions on her feet, nor has she a thick nail on one of her toes, although it was positively stated on the coroner's inquest that these marks were there. It is thought by many that there was an ulterier design in the identification of the body in Jersey City as Mrs. Richardson's, and the further investigation that is on foot may possibly reveal a very interesting state of facts.

BOARS or HEALTH.—The number of deaths during the past week in this city was 189— Adults 100, and children 89.

THE COLUMBUS ORANGE GIRL-A REAL

THE COLINIUS GRANG GRI.—A RAJ
Draws to high of the 19th of April, Mr.
Q. P. R. James, the well-known norwish, had an attack of paralysis at Vernice, where he is Cansad General.

The Collinius of Columbus (Ghic) and visition at the Control General and the Columbus (Ghic) and visition to the Columbus (Ghic) and visition at the Control General and the Columbus (Ghic) and visition of the Col unconscious of pain, commenced singing as cheerfully as if she were at play. It was a touching scene.

Brass and Brivery.—Mr. Bean, editor and proprietor of the Messenger, at Fremont, Ohio is a model of imcorruptibility. In 1858 he was Clerk of the House, under Mr. Allen, and he testifies before the Covede Committee that he received $5,000 from Mr. Wendell just before the passage of the English bill. He further testifies that he tried to influence no votes with it, but simply put the money in his pocket, and declares that it did not even influence his care opinion? That man "knew Beans," but Wendell idin't.—Exchange.

The deficiency of Mr. Fowler, New York Postmaster, is $175,000, for which there are surveius for $75,000.

A woman in New Orleans was married on the 5th instant to her cighth husband. She has married every year since 1852, and each year one husband dies, to be shortly succeeded by another.—Exchange.

Buniness Places in Prilabelphia liable to pay mercantile taxes, shows that the total number is fourteen thousand four hundred, a tolerably respectable number for a provincial town.

Furny.—The following announcement, harding approximated abrain Lincoln, of Illinois, for the "local Chamberlatas" opposed to the feelings of the lady named, is from the London Gasette of May 1:

"London Chamberlatas" opposed able to the feelings of the lady named, is from the London Gasette of May 1:

"London Chamberlatas" opposed able to the feelings of the lady named, is from the London Gasette of May 1:

"London Chamberlatas" opposed able to the stranger the poverty of her home, and the necessity of her home, and the necessity of her some and become more intimately acquainted. He did se, and after successive visits won the confidence and letter for $75,000.

The Republican Convention at Chicago, nominated abram Lincoln, of Illinois, for the four provincial town.

The CHICAGO CONVENTION.

The Grey Treaded the payment and single payment and single

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

The Republican Convention at Chicago, nominated Abram Lincoln, of Illinois, for the Presidency—and Hannibal Hamlin, of Maine, for the Vice Presidency.

The great contest in the Convention was between Seward and Lincoln. Seward led off on the first batlet with 173 votes, to Lincoln's 102—the rest scattered between Messra. Bates, McLean, Chase, Cameron, &c. On the second ballot Pennsylvania withdrew the name of Cameron, and cast her vote for Lincoln, which plainly showed "the coming man." On the third ballot Lincoln reached 230%, or within 1½ of a majority—when State after State altered its vote until the vete stood Lincoln 350, Seward 111½. Then New York moved that the nomination be made unanimous, the motion being carried amid great enthusiasus.

At the evening seasies, Hannibal Hamlin, of Maine, was nominated for the Vice Presidency on the second ballot—C. M. Clay, of Ky., being his principal competitor.

The platform adopted enunciates the usual Republican principles, with a tariff plank, and a plank preservative of the rights of the foreign born population.

Abram Lincoln was born in Kentucky in 1809, and is of Pennsylvania Quaker descent. He has risen from the position of a laborar on a farm to Abrain Lincoln was born in Kentucky in 1809, and is of Pennsylvania Quaker descent. He has risen from the position of a laborer on a farm to his present position. He was for many years a principal leader of the old Whig party of Illinois, and a warm supporter of Henry Clay. Hannibal Hamilin was a prominent Democratic leader in Maine until 1854, when he joined the Republicans. He was afterwards elected Governor of Maine, and is now one of the U. S. Senators from that State. He was surprised at receiving the news of his nomination.

LATRET NEWS FROM EUROPE.—Garribaldi has left Sardinia to join the Sudlian insurrectionists—the Piedmontese government forbade his departure, but he got off safely. The King of Naples has asked the Northern powers for counsel. The Sicilians wish to annex Sicily and Naples to Sardinia, and have a united Italy.

Prussia is putting her army on a war footing, fearing an invasion from France. Rugland is manufacturing Armstrong guns day and night.

land is manufacturing Armstrong guns day and night.

1,000 Irishmen are about enrolling themselves in the army of the Pope. The French soldiers will not leave Rome until the Pope feels assured that he can preserve tranquility without them.

The Great Eastern is advertised to sail from Southampton for New York on the 9th of June.

Cotton and Breadstuffs are quiet. Provisions generally quiet. Bacon has advanced.

ALL are not just because they do no wrong ; But he, who will not wrong me when he may, He only is the truly Just. I praise not them Who in their petty dealings pilfer not

When he might plunder, and defy surprise His be the praise who, looking down with scorn On the false judgment of the part al herd, Consults his own clear heart, and boldly dares To be, not to be thought, an honest man!

Among the wines of Switzerland bor-dering on those of Germany, which are noted as of moment, is the "Wine of Blood," or "Sang des Suisses," so called because the vineyards occupy the ground on which the Swiss defeated the Dauphin of France, at the head of 30,000 men, in 1444, the Swiss being only 1,600 men, 16 of whom alone sur-

> "None patriot deeds forget, Basic still tells the tale Ages have past, and Switzers yet Rejoice in their proud valo."

nvestigation that is on foot may it a very interesting state of facts.

of my legs; I trust I may never lose the use of my legs by the use of this cup."

and Mait are quiet.

PROVISIONS—There is very little movement in bidd Meats, and prices are without alteration, Mess Pork selling in a small way at $18,256,18,50, and city Mess Heef at $15,616,18,50, and city Mess Heef at $15,616,18,50, and city Mess Heef at $15,616,18,50, and so moving off in a small way, part to go South, at 10@12c for plain and fanny Hams, 10¢ for Shoulders, usual terms. Of green Meats the stocks are light and the market firmer, aspecially for Shoulders in salt, which are wanted at 71,67¢c. Sides are quoted at 9½,90¢, and Hams, in salt and pickle 9½,610¢, usual terms, with sales of 500 pkgs at quotations. Lard is firmer, and small sales of prime Western are making at 11½ for bells and tes, now held higher, and 12½,612¢c for kegs, each and time. Butter is dull, Roll selling slowly at 134,618¢, the latter for choice. For Grease there is more demand, and considerable sales are reported at 8c. Cheese is steady at 11,611¢ for New York. Eggs are more plenty, and sales are reported at 11,611¢ do dozen.

COTTON—The receipts and stocks are moderate, but the advices from abroad have imparted more firmness to the market, and buyers have taken hold more freely, the week's sales reaching about 1400 bales, in lote, at from 7 up to 12½,613¢ for inferior to good middling and middling fair qualities, most-ly Uplands, cash and time.

BARK—There is not much Quereitron offering or selling, the demand having fallen off, and a few small sales of 1st No 1 only have been made at $20.

small sales of 1st No 1 only have been made at $20 to 5. It on.

BEESWAX.—There is very little offering or selllng, and we quote Yellow at 34@35e $5. 5.

COAL orders are coming in rather more freely, and prices are unchanged. Schuylkill White Ask Lump $3,20@3,35; Perpared do $3,20@3,35; Red Ash do $3,30@3,35 C. Lehigh Lump $3,75; Prepared do $3,62; by retail do $4,50; Schuylkill Prepared $4,25.

COFPEE.—The arrivals are light, and mostly all confined to Laguayra, of which some further small sales are reported at 12. @16c, on time, as to quality. The demand is limited and holders firm in their views.

ty. The demand is their views.

COPPER continues dull. Of Yellow Metal there coppers to notice at quotations.

their views.

COPPER continues dull. Of Yellow Metal there is about the usual business to notice at quotations. FEATHERS continue scarce, and a small business of the term of the term of the search of the term o orders are searce.

LEAD is quiet and the stock light, a small sale of Virginia was made at $5,80, and 2500 pigs Galena at a price not public, said to be at about $5,87‡ the 100 hs.

LEATHER—Holders are very firm in their fully former rates, the tendency, if anything, being upward.

LUMBER The market has been somewhat un LUMBER—The market has been somewhat unsettied by the recent freshets in the interior, and holders of white Pine have put up their prices fully $1.72 M. The damage, however, is not so great as a first reported, and there has been very little selling at the advance. Yellow Sap Boards move off as wanted at $14@16.78 M. A large auction sale of Southern flooring was made a few days ago at $19@2.72 M. equal to cash.

MOLASSES—There is not much movement in the market, prime lots only, which are scarce, being in request at full prices. Sales include some 200 casks. Cuba Muscovado at 28.66.50c, and 350 bbls fair. New Orleans at 46.66.47c, all on the usual credit.

FLANTER—There is not much arriving, and sales are reported at $2,75(g.3.2) to some SEEDS—There is very little Cloverseed offering or selling, and some 500 bus have been picked up, in lots, at $46(g.4,75 for common to prime, mostly at $4,50 to $4,62,120 bus. Timothy is scarce, and in the absence of sales we quote it at $3,50(g.3,75 20 bus. Domestic Flaxseed is selling on arrival at $4,50 to $4,62,30 bus.

$1.62 % bus.

SPIRITS—There is very little doing in foreign, but the prices of Brandies are fully sustained, and from N. E. Rum is selling at 35(5)36. Whiskey continues dull, Pennsylvania bblsselling moderately at 21 jc; Ohio do, 22(6)22 j, drudge 20(6)20 jc and bhds at 21 (@ 21 to hdds at 21 66 21 jc.

SUJARS have been arriving freely, but the market is more active, and prices at the close a fraction better. The sales include some 1600 hdds, in lots, at 6 (66 7 jc for Guba, 6 (66 jc for New Orleans, and from 6 j up to 8c for Porto Rico, on time. The reflects have also put up their prices je $\mathbb{B}$ in the TALLOW continues steady, with rather more doing in city rendered at 10 jc $\mathbb{B}$ in the TOBACCO—The market remains inactive, and prices without any quotable change, the cales being confined to small lots at steady rates, including Seed Leaf.

ful competitor for the grant of the use of the grant function of my legs; I trust I may never lose the use of my legs by the use of this cup."

Sorrow comes soon enough without despendency; it does a man no good to carry asking rates, which are nearly nominal; the sales generally being in a small way at irregular prices.

FURDAY EVENING POST,

Description of a man power and confidence; but, unfortunately, they are aften very far from giving him either feeling or politeness.

The Saturday Evening Post facilities of a famous man, that the humblest persons are bound to give an account of their leisure; and, in the midst of solitades, to be of some use to seeling a politeness.

The Saturday Evening Post famous man, that the humblest persons are bound to give an account of their leisure; and, in the midst of solitades, to be of some use to seeling. The spare minutes of a year are a beggar half a dollar, when the latter exclaimed with gratitude:

"May beaven rewardyon a thousand times!"

"Well, what would that amount to seemly five hundred dollars!" answered the rich man, willing.

"Well, what would that amount to seemly five hundred dollars!" answered the rich man, seeming.

Post facilities of a year are in a tradition in Barbary that the see was once absorbed by auts.

Post facilities of the famous to seem the facilities of the famous to be seeded to see the facilities of the famous to be seeded to see the facilities of the famous to be seeded to see the facilities of the famous to be seeded to see the facilities of the famous to be seeded to see the facilities of the famous to be seeded to see the facilities of the famous to be seeded to see the facilities of the famous to be seeded to see the facilities of the famous to be seeded to see the facilities of the famous to be seeded to see the famous to be seeded to see the famous to be seeded to see the famous to see the famo

The empty of Beef Castle darries Mankers work amounted to 1300 head. The prices ranged from $150 is 1000 hea and collinary and good at from $5 to 10 is 100 he. Shoop—5000 head were sold at from $4 to $40 is no heared. 1000 head of Hogs were sold at from $7 to 8 for still fed, and from $6 to $7 is 90 head were sold at from $7 to 8 for still fed, and from $6 to $7 is 100 head were sold at from $20 to $6, asserding to quality and condition.

May 19.—FLOUR is stoody; sales of 13,000 bbb. State and Oble brunds are unchanged. Sections heavy at 25, 500 db. 50. Wheat has a deciliaing tendency; 15,000 bus sold at 146e for red Wintern, 180e for Milwankes Club, 130 db 121gs for Obleage spring. Core has also a deciliain sendency; mixed 7169 72c, yellow 75c.—Whistoy discopling scales at 22c.

MARRIAGES.

Marriago notices must always be accom-

On the 16th instant, at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. Jas. M. Growell, Mr. John C. Donaldon, of Pottaville, Schuylkill county, to Miss Manylas Bellas, Baylakill county, to Miss Manylas Bellas, Baylakill founty, to Miss Manylas Bellas, Baylakill founty, Grand Mr. Janes W. Honon, to Mrs. Many E. Tilman On Monday, 14th instant, by the Rev. Thea. G. Allen, Mr. Janes W. Honon, to Mrs. Many E. Tilman On Monday, 14th instant, by the Rev. Geo. Duffield, Jr., Mr. Gronen F. Colenzan, to Miss Josephus, daughter of Jos. Altken, Esq. both of this city.

On the 16th instant, by the Rev. J. M. Douglas, Mr. Davin Guidlan, to Miss Harran E. Mansins, daughter of John Marodon, Esq. both of this city.

At Moorestown, N. J., May 9th, by the Rev. H. Hastings Weld, Charles H. Tayre, of Norristówn, Pa. to Adrilla A. daughter of the late John S. Doughten, of New Albany, Ja. On the 16th instant, by the Rev. John Chambers, Mr. Edward C. Marklay, Jr. to Miss Lizzin Bickley, both of this city.

DEATHS.

Notices of Deaths must always be accom-anied by a responsible name.

On the 13th of fifth month, RUTHANNA JOHES, daughter of John and Mary S. Jones, of Cheitenham, in her 38th year.

On the morning of the 11th instant, MARY T. PLRASARYS, reliet of the late Jos. Pleasants, in her 71th year.

On the morning of the 10th instant, JRRU CURTIS CLAY, son of the Rev. J. C. and S. Clay, in his 14th year.

TIS CLAY, son of the Rev. J. C. and S. Clay, in his 16th year.

On Tuesday morning, the 15th instant, FRANK-LIZ COMEN, in his 66th year.

On the 14th instant, Mrs. ISABELLA DAVIS, wife of the Rev. Jas. M. Davis, and daughter of Mr. Geo. W. McClelland.

On the 14th instant, DANIBL ECKMAN, aged 51 years.

years.
On the morning of the 13th instant, after a long liness, Extraprior A. Ens., wife of Mahlon B. Erb, and daughter of Eli Tomkins, aged 23 years.
On the 13th instant, Mrs. Manyha J. Eventy, aged 39 years.
On the 13th instant, Joseph Huppy, in his 48th year.

On the 18th instant, ELIZA A. LYNDALL, widow of the late Benj. Lyndall, in her 43d year.

THE STOCK MARKET. CORRECTED FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST, BY WITHERS & PETERSON, BANKERS,

Bid	A	sk od.	RAILROAD STO	BROG
LOANS.			RAILROAD STO
U # 6 pr ot, 1856	100	100	Ponnay vanta HR
41 41 1079	108		ist mort bonds 101	10 4
14 14 100	100	700	2nd 15 00
" A " compos '74			atoek 30
Phila 6 as of old	1024	103	Cam & Amboy 6 pr	90.5
Phila 6 pr dt, old	1064		ot bonds, 1864 -	96
11 8 11	84		stock 131	192
	75		Reading R M car	****
Pitta & pr ot.	43	7.0	of hands. 70 83	821
All'uv City 6 or of	800	73	mort 6's '44 -	-
All'sy City 6 pr et	43	561	1 '04 72	9 73
Penn 6 pr ct	109	Man	stock 21	2.4
	944	9.5	Lohigh Valley H. R.
Tenn 6 "	91 8	912	mort 6 pr ot 91	9 118
" 5 " ebwaron	80	Acces	stock 40	-
Kentucky 6 pr ot	Military	1041	Phil, Wil & Balt mag	886	stock 41
Ohio "1886	196	100	6 pr ot loan, '80 97
N Carolina 6 pr of	90	500 4	Chon Val H. H., '73 36
Virginia "	971	MICH	Tioga H H '75 -	118
Ind State a pr ot	99	(NO.	Willman Elmira
		-	7's lat mort 60
new bunds	914	98	2rid " 10
N V City, 172-5 BANK STOCK	314	116	stock i	. 11
BANK STOCK	15. A	e.	Catawises
PHILADELPH			Heaver Meadow	441
North America	148	148	proferred to prot is	631
Park Mea	1166	117		-
Let w Men	/664		North Penn's H R	94
Commercial	6.9	61		4 70
Modesnice	26 (Phil Ger & Nor RR	9 10
Bouthwark	60	26.6	steek div doff 12	49
P Township	31	351	Phil Ger & Nor RR steek, div d off 18 6 prot loan 97 Minehill R R 61
Kensington	60	371	Minehili H R 61
Girard	46	464	Har & Lan R R
Western	-	60	stock 57	5 58
Man & Moo	264	27	bonds '83 99	-
Commerce		90	L. Bohuylkill R R
Tradesman's	694	Attack		8 15
City	43		Long Island R R
Consolidation	221	-	stock 13
Commonwealth	31	325	bonds 88
Cura Exchange	nex.	214	Erio H H stock -	Nec
Germantown		all	Hudson River H M	100
Pittsburg, Pitt'hg	58	me	N Y Contral 80
Exchange "	56		Michigan Central 47	5 408
Kentucky, Ky	125	126	Illinois 67	1 -
Northern	126	-	Michigan Southern 17	1 4100
Louisville '	125	See	CANAL STOCKS	AND
Parmers Union, Nash, Tenn Planters	118	*	Seh'll Nav 6 pr ot
Union, Nach, Tenn	90	E esse	Soul in tara a br of	5 746
Planters	707	100	loan, '82 74
N O Gas Light Com & R H Bank.	181	-		86
COM M M M BASE,		94	stock preferred 20
Vicksburg		74	Lohigh Nav stock 14
Washington Can	24	23	mort 6 pr ot 100
LightCo	14	111	scrip 3/
New Creek	1.0		Morris Consol'd 56
		- 1	preferred 113 Chea & Hei 40	114
New Granada			Chea At Mai 40
New Grenada	12	200		-
New Grenada	17	20	bonds 73	-
New Grenada N America Ins'ca N Liberties Gas	17	20	bonds 73
New Grenada N America Ins'ca N Liberties Gas Southwark and	30	20	Union 1	-
New Grenada N America Ins'ca N Liberties Gas			bonds 73	-

Choice Duets for the Violin.

PLEYEL'S Celebrated Instructive and Pro-ressive Duets for the Violin. Price 50 cts.
Published by OLIVER DITSON 4 Co., 277 Washington Street, Boston.

New York, are desirous of employing Young Men and Women, in selling their books and canvassing for their publications. Those adapted to the business can make good wages. For particulars, address as above.

HOOSIER CORN.—J. STOVER says. "I produced 30 bushels from four ears,"—ears 15 to 20 inches long. One package and recipe for making my celebrated "FISH BAIT DROPS" to make the fish bite, 30 cts. (in all H. DIPPE. Bluffton, Weils, Co., Indiana.

THING LIKE, Well, I had none at all until I used GRAHAM S ONGCENT, which forced it to grow strong and lawriant in about five or six weeks, it left no stain, and does not injure the skin. You can buy it of me at 1979 Namou St., N. York. Price $1, sent by mail postage free, anywhere.

R. G. GRAHAM.

BANK NOTE LIST.

BY WITHERS & PETERSON, BANKERS,

CORRECTED FOR THE BATURDAY EVENING POOR, BY WITHERS & PETERBON, BANKERS,
No. (9 Bouth Third Street.

Philodelphio, May 19, 1860.

Pring Pr

CONTINENTAL HOTEL.

PHILADELPHIA. CORNER CHESTNUT AND NINTH STREETS.

OPENED IN PERSUARY, 1860.

This magnificent establishment, now in successful operation, is universally conceded to be in all respect The Most Complete Hotel in the World,

The Most Complete Hotel in the World, and will be conducted upon a seale of liberality in all its departments which cannot fail to make it the popular head-quarters for pleasure four-interfrom the Kouth and Wost, during the early Rummer and the Autumn. Accommodations are offered for nearly 100 quests, fitted and faminhed with every modern improvement which experience could suggest for comfort and convenience, while a vertical trailway is to be introduced to convey parties by steam in a commodious car to the upper floors, thus securing the parer air and quiet of the higher recome scitematch fatigues of assending states.

Another novel improvement has been effected by which a powerful fan-wheel, (operated by steam), forces a current of fresh air through the public rooms and corridors, cooling and ventilating the house in a superior manner.

The interior arrangements and furnishing have been completed under the personal supervision of Paran filtewens, the Lemes, under whose management the well-known success of the Revere House and Point Clear Hotel in Mobile, Ais., and the Vifth Avenue Hotel in New York has been established, and no efforts or expense will be spared to render the Continental the most attractive travellers' Home in the Union.

J. E. STEVENS & CO. my 17-21.

BY WITHERS A PETERSON, BANKERS,
No. 39 Bouth Third Street.

The following were the closing quotations for Stocks on Saturday last. The market closing steady:

Bid. Asked.

Bi

DOLLIE DUTTON'S LEVEES at the Corner of Tenth and Chestout, every Afternoon and Evening to May 26th—no longer.

DIRANE TO READ THIS,—If you want Employment, send at once for Mr. SEARS! CIRCULAR TO BOOK AGENTS. Our Publica-tions are considered among the most saleable. Ad-dress, post patd. ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, augl3-11.

AS GOOD AS THAT MADE BY BEES, and which costs only six cents per pound with full instructions, sent for 25 cents.

Address Box 36, Brasher Falls, N. Y.

IF YOU WANT FIRST CLASS CLOTHING Go to CHARLES STOKES, NO. 824 CHESTNUT ST , PHILADELPHIA,

One low and uniform price

WANTED!

WANTED -Agents in a business that pays from $25 to $80 per month, according to expability. Full particulars sent free to all who inclose stamp to pay return postage.

1. HALE, JR. A.CO., my5-4t.

Newburyport, Mass.

W ANTED AGENTS - 44 to 47 per day readily realized. Enclose a red stamp, for particulars, to Box 161, care of B. LOCKWOOD, Broadway P. O., New York City. jyle-M

THE CONFESSIONS AND EXPERIENCE OF AN INVALID—Published for the Benefit OF AN INVALID—Published for the Benefit and as a Warning and a Caution to YOUNG MEN WHO SUFFER FROM NERVOUS DEBILITY, PREMATURE DECAY, Ac, supplying at the same time the Means of Self-Gure. By one who cured himself, after being put to great expense through medical impection and quackery. Single copies may be had of the author, NATHANIEL MAY YAIR, Est., Belford, Kings County, New York, by inclusing a post-paid addressed envelope.

5,400 AGENTH WANTED To sell 4 new inventions. Agents have made over $25,000 on one - better than all other similar agencies. Send four stamps and get 80 pages particulars, gratis. SPHRAIM BROWN, mb24-131 Lowell, Mass.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Thirty-five cents a line for the first insertion. Thirty cents a line for such subsequent inner Double Column Advertisements—One dell line for every ignortion.

De Paymont is required in advance.

THE AUTHOR

"THE LAMPLICATER."

The Most Universally Popular Novel Ever Published on this Continent, " THE BAN WRITTEN AND OF ITS

A NEW AND BRILLIANT BOMASCE. The Scene of which is laid in the factuating

ORIENT, And which has been presented by the press,

ONE OF THE MOST ORIGINAL WORKS OF THE DAY. ITS TITLE IS

EL FUREIDIS.

IT IS A HANDSOME VOLUME, Neatly bound in music, and is for sale by all

PRICE ONR BOLLAR.

Or it will be sent, post-paid, on receipt of price by the Publishers, TICKNOR & FIELDS. BOSTON.

This ARM and HAND are so perfect initiations of nature that the wearer's less is quite unnoticed. The joints of the schoor, wrist, fingers and thembare all gracefully moved by elastic tendons, and rendered useful to the element extent.

THE PATENT LEG has been in use 12 years, and the inventor has received (over all competitions) fifty most bonovary awards from distinguished and scientific societies in the principal effice of the world; among which are the great Manata of the Wonle's Exzistions in Lordon and Maw York.

Nearly 8,000 limbs in daily use, and an increasing paironage indicate the satisfaction "Palmer's Patent" has given.

Pamphiets, giving full information, sent gratis to every applicant.

B. FRANK PALMER, cell-1y 376 Obestaut St., Phila.

TWO MAGNIFICENT ENGRAVINGS. FALLS

NIAGARA. GIVING VIEWS

OF THE AMERICAN AND CANADA SIDES.

BY JAMES HAMILTON, The Colebrated American Marine Painter.

These Engravings are each 18 by 32 Inches nd are executed in the highest style of the art, on steel, from the original drawings.

They will be sent to subscribers securely placed on rollers, postage pre-paid, on the receipt of Pive Dollars for the pair

JOHN M. BUTLER, Publisher, 142 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADA., PA.

TO INVENTORS AND PATENTEES.

1.000 COMMERCIAL AGENTS and FOREIGN PATTEN procure AMERICAN and FOREIGN PATTEN, and attend to all business pertaining thereto. Inquiries regarding the novelty and patentiality of inventions and the novelty and patentiality of inventions and entrance, Patent Office, Washington, District of Columbia.

HARD TIMES NO MORE.

ANY PERSON (Lady or Gentleman.) in th ANY PERICON (Lody or treatments,) in the United States, possessing a small expital of from $3 to $7, can enter into an easy and respectable business, by which from $5 to $10 ran pay cas as malliand. For particulars, address (with stamp.) ACTON & CO.

oct30 tf AN orth Stath St., Philads.

PER MONTH: HONORABLE BUSINESS: AGENTS, Local or Travelling, wanted in every Town and County in the Union, to engage in the sale of New Articles (Patent) of Utility, Beauty and Novelty, demanded in every family, office, store and manufactory, affording large profits and quick sale. No humbug or medicine, and no homes for patent right. Books of description, terms, references, and notices mailed on application with three cent stamp, to WILBUR SMITH A CO., feb4-171 36 South Third Street, Phila., Pa.

BOOK AGENTS

WANTED, to sell RAPID SELLING, Valuable Family Works, at Low PRICES, WITH INTERNSTING CONVENTS, and Superhly Colored Plates. For civulars, with full particulars, apply, if you live Rast, to HENDE? HOWE, 102 Nameau St., New York; if you live West, the same, 113 Main Street, Clining of the West, the same, 113 Main Street, Clining and St., New York;

TWO WORKS, VALUABLE TO THE SICK OR WELL, sent by mail. No pay expected until received, read and approved.

Address: Dr S. S. FITCH, 714 Broadway, N. Y.

let. SIX LECTURES on the Causes, Prevention and Cure of Lung, Throat and Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, and Mate and Fenale Complaints; on the mode of Preserving Health to One Hundred Years. 360 pages, 21 engravings. Price 58 ceuts, in silver or Post-office stamps.

of Post-office stamps.

2d. A WORK on the Cause and Cure of Diseases of the Heart, Stomach, Liver, Bowels and Kidneys; on Apoplexy, Paisy and Pyspepsia, Why we Grow Old, and What Causes Disease. 181 pages, 6 angravings. Price 36 cents.

Say which Book you wish, giving name, State, County, Town and Post office.

Wit and humor.

PLAIN AS DAY.

on, while in the employ of well established mercantile house, I witnesse a laughable incident. Mr. F., the senior part nor of the firm, was a great booster. He boast-ed of his great business qualifications—his option, do. But above all, the old bearted of being a good and plain This, none could deny, for the reaon that none had ever seen a comple of his companality; for he never wrote or merced betters himself. But it one day happened that Mr. F. resolved a tassauge from a neighboring house, that required an immediate snewer, and being so busy that he could not answer it in spatched them. Soon the messenger returned and handed Mr. F. a note. Duppening it to be an answer to his own, Mr. F. opened it; but with all his business tact, he could not decine words, and handing it to one of his he remarked, with a contemptuous " Pretty writing, that; who the de he suppose can read it: If I could not accountly, I would not write at all." "Hog pardon, sir," said the messenger, "but that is the reason Mr. A. sent it back; he could not read it himself." "Read it! How the donor door he expect I can read it then?"
"But, sir, that is your own writing." "Eh!
what! My writing?" And Mr. F.'s face changed color, as he grasped the missive from him in the programme, and a seat at the Presi-his partner's hand, and again bringing it to is; and just as plain as day!" This caused a ton, his recollections were found to be rather roar of laughter among the party present. And indefinite. But something being said about from that day, the merchant-prince was no Yorktown, he remarked: "Yaas, I vash at nore heard to boast of his exquisite penman-

"Can You Ray Cnow !"-Lake Mahopac was hotels in its immediate vicinity were, that the farm-houses were filled with visitors. One of the worthy farmers residing there was especially worried almost to death by here ders. They bund fault with his table—this thing was had, and that wasn't fit to get !

"Darn it," said old Isaac, one day, "what a fuss you are making. I can est anything."
"Can you est crow?" said one of his young

"Yes, I kin est crow."

" Bet you a hat," said his guest. The bet was made, a crow caught, and nice-ly reasted; but, before serving up, they con-trived to season it with a good dose of flootch

Isaac sat down to the crow. He took a good bite, and began to chew away.
"To be sure I kin eat crow." Another bite, and an awful face! "Yes, I kin est-crow (symptoms of nansea,) -I kin -eat -orow : but I'll be darn'd if I hanker arter it!"

Poor Isaac arose from the crow feast in come-what of a burry and bolted towards the back

PERLING HIS DIGHTY .- Only a day or two since, we chanced to hear a darkey delivering self somewhat after the manner of one his race in Old Virginia, as noticed by the Petersburg Express of a late date, in this wise: In front of the Central Warehouse, a philoso-phical darkey, leaning lasily against one of the wheels of a dray, thus delivered himself to a brother John, who was disposing of himself "All niggers ought to feel de dignity of bein' niggers, 'cept free niggers what dunno what dignity am. Die minuit I'm wuff about fifteen hundred deliars," and he gave a nstrative gesture with his left forelinger, white folks can't say dat for departure. Now dar," and he pointed to a gentlemanly vagrant, "is a white man; he couldn't turn hisself into money to save his life. More 'n dat, he at' wuff nuffin, he dumo nuffin, and he wo' de nuffin. I feels de dignity of de fack, and dat's what makes me say what

SCREE IN COURT .- A few days since, in a Western court, the following incident took place. The lawyers inside the bar were very noisy, holding loud conversation, so that the evidence of witnesses could scarcely be heard. The Deputy Sheriff rapped on the deak with a knife, of ponderous handle. Still the noise was unabated. After a pause be again rapped for order, but the lawyers chatted on. riff again brought down his knife on the table with three tremendous raps, as he looked daggers at the disturbers.

of the bar, rising suddenly to his feet, with rerkable gravity of countenance; "Judge, It is impossible for gentlemen to hold con while that person (pointing to the Deputy Sheriff,) is allowed to make the noise

This cool speech brought roars of laughter, in which, of course, the court joined.

RATHER BLUEY .- In a family with whom I am acquainted, there is a four year old, who rejoices in the name of Harry. Harry's mother had been very sick, and his grands had made frequent visits to the house during the time of her daughter's sickness. the mother recovered, the grandmether, think frequent visits, and only called occasional On her visiting the house one evening she was much surprised at hearing Harry ask why she did not oull during the week previous 'Oh," said she, "you didn't want me, did

"No," said he, with the most impossat ex ie, "but den't you ofte when we don't want you ?"

A Lorenz Por la floor Hor .- "Mother, me ther, you never saw such a man as Mr. Small Because he goes mad so easily." What makes you think so?" "I was going down the street, and the no up a gust of wind and blow Mr. Smal has off, and then how he did rave and tes

Armson or Scowars.—Samerant relates the following associate of Christopher Schwarts, a famous Garman painter, which, if true, re-dounds more to his ingenuity than credit. Having been engaged to paint the celling of the Town Hall, at Munich, by the day, his love of dissipation induced him to neglect his work so that the magistrates and overseers of the work were frequently obliged to hunt him out at the tavers. As he could no longer drink in quiet, he stuffed an image of himself, left the logs hanging down between the staging waers he was accustomed to work, and sent one o his been companious to move the image a little two or three times a day, and to take it away at noon and pight. By means of this deseption, he drank, without the least dis-impance, a whole formight together, the imoe, a whole fortnight together, the innheeper being aware of the plot. The officers me round twice a day to look after him, and sing the well-known stockings which he was accustomed to wear, suspected nothing wrong, and went their way, greatly extelling the own convert as the most industrious and con scientious painter in the world.

A REVOLUTIONARY CHARACTER. --- An amusin affair occurred not many years ago at a Fourth of July calchestion in an interior town to Ponn. sylvania. Revolutionary veterans were be ming very hard to find, yet a proce with no old soldler in it, was not to be wil lingly submitted to. An honest old German Revolutionary repute, was discovered at the last hour. An open carriage was assigned to light, exclaimed, "Why, bless me, so it dinner to give his reminiscences of Washing-Yorktown." "Under Washington?" the President. "Yasa, I vash couder Washington ven I surrendered." "No! you mistake, my venerable friend," exclaimed the President, "Washington never surrendered." "Yans, but you see, I cash one of de Hes

> Nor FRENCH.—A facetions Scotchman some time ago took a trip over to France, and a tonished the natives there in no small degree In the hotel where he put up, in Boulogne, the servants were all newly-imported cock-neys, and Mr. M....., who is a sterling wag, mystified them not a little with his broad Sootch. Getting up one morning rather earlier than usual, he called a waiting-maid, and as costed her with.

> Fetch me ma shoon, lassee. "Ab, sir," said she, "I don't understand French!"

A POPULAR PREACHER ON SMOKE. Mr. Spurgeon was invited by a wealthy gen-

the country, some forty miles from Landon, to come to his place and preach. Arriving there, he found a huge tent erected in the park, with bales of hay arranged tier above tier for seats, a pile of bales for a pulpit, and three or four thousand people waiting to hear him. He preached, and the people thought they had never heard such preaching before. The services over, he retired to the gentleman's house to dine, accompanied by several ministers of his own order, and followed by hundreds of his heavers. The conversation at table, in which the young preacher took the lead, was on the sin of needless self-indulgence, and the Christian obligation of self denial. After dinner an old minister, whose hearing was rather limited, pulled out his pipe, seemed anxious to light, but evidently felt somewhat embar rassed from the preceding conversation. He looked at his pipe, then at the fire, and then at Mr. Spurgeon, at the fire, at the pipe. At length he said :

Brother Spurgeon, do you think it would be wrong for me to smoke?

Have you any Scripture to justify the praction?" asked the preacher. Well, I think I have," added the venerable father in Israel. "I shall be glad to hear what it is," resoined

Mr. Spurgeon "Well, brother, David was certainly a smeker. "Ah, how do you make that out?"

"Well, he speaks, you know, in one of the pealms, of going through the valley of Baca (Bac-ca); and I make no doubt that it was a private plantation for his own particular use. Spurgeon cast a funny side-glance towards his host, and, keeping the serious half of his countenance towards the old man, replied

EXPERIMENT WITH AN IDIOT, -Dr. Madio reates that an idiot at Salaburg, appeared to be singularly inquerentible of fear, an experiment of an appailing character and appailing consewas made upon him as a means of putting his susceptibility to a test. It was to speak to me for the next three month d to produce in him the impression that he was with a dead man come to life. A person, accordingly, had himself laid out as a orpse, and enveloped in a shroud, and the idiot was ordered to watch over the dead. The idiot perceiving some motion in the corpse, desired it to lie still; but the pretended corpse, uising itself in spite of this admonition, idiot seized a hatchet, which unluckily was rithin his reach, and out off first one of feet of the unfortunate counterfeit, and then, nmoved by his cries, cut off his head. He

Mr. Pickes thus pours forth in honor of

You are a good agg, very-a perpetual brick-And you don't go hard on the lemancholy, and make me sick.

As some of these other astrones do, Who ain't fit to tie the string o' year shoe Great playeress, adieu | great actrum, good-bye, And I will take out my gingham flag and wipe my weeping eye !"

When a lover dotes on his darling, a real acts as an anti-dote.

The Rending Chronicle speaks of an old lady 103 years of age, who mends all the cicthes of her sen and his family. We sup-pess she thinks that "It is never too late to

LEAP YEAR.-UNPROTECTED INNOCENCE.

COURTING DAYS.

Do you remember, love, the days When hand in hand we sped together, The dear old spot that saw us meet, Despite the changes of the weather ! The seat on which so oft we sat, Save when by other sweetheart taken And the warm kim at parting enatched Sweet type of constancy unshaken And oh ' how long appeared the time Till each the well known footsteps hearing And ah ' how sweet the bells' soft chime True to their quarters both appearing.

The dear old seat is lost foreve The quarters tell the hour of eight. But we shall meet as lovers ; United now we pass through life And share each other's joy and sorrow Thank God for that bestowed to-day, And trust Him for the coming morrow Sweet love, our courting days are gone, But yet methinks with truth not sporting If one in heart we journey on, Why, what's a wedded life but courting? L M T

In other climes we wander now

THE REWARD OF VIRTUE.

An alderman of this city told me the other day that he had never done a good action which he was not doubly rewarded for, and, strange and incredible as it may sound, he has done many. My experience, however, has not been so enquiraging. The mischief I have done has been committed with perfect impunity, but almost every good action of which I have been guilty, has been punished with a everity proportioned to its disinterestedness

When Miss Emily & who years since arrived at the immovable age of twenty seven, was about to be wedded to a dashing young fellow, calling himself Rupert Stanley, Esq., she happened to encounter one of my beaux-I did not intend to speak in the plural, or to parade the circumstance—who told me in con Science that Emily's source was a great scamp not interfere in the matter. Emily, being my old friend, I was morally obliged to tell ber brother what I had heard, and begged him to acquaint himself secretly but thoroughly with the antecedents of his sister's betrothed. He did so, and found that Rupert Stanley, Esq. had half-a-dozen aliases, and that he was a regular rogue, having been imprisoned more than once for swindling.

- kicked the impostor out of th house, and Emily lost her last chance, such as it was. Her brother was very thankful for my interference, but she has never forgiven me for dissipating her delicious illusion, and always talks as if it were my fault that she is an old maid. But I have urged again and again, you betrothed was a great rascal." "Not so bad as they say, I am sure," eplies; "and there is no telling what a good wife might not have made him.

But he was married to several women. "

"Not really because it could not have been possible," insists Emily; "but even if it were so, that only shows how captivating were his me to prefer me to all of them. He might have got divorced from them all, and man ried-

Pha! Rmfly you are crasy for a husband! I break in, throwing her into a rage, causis her to bounce out of the room, and to refu afterwards .- A Lady in N. Y. Atlas

MOTHER AND CHILD.-The greatest painte who have ever lived have tried to paint the beauty of that simple thing, a mother with Raffaelle, to whom God gave the spirit of bear ty in a measure in which He never gave it perhaps, to any other man, tried again again for years, painting over and over that could not satisfy himself. Each of his pi tures is most beautiful—each in a diffe way; and yet none of them is perfect. The is more beauty in that simple every-day sigh than he or any man could express by his pen-cil and his colors. And yet it is a sight which We see every day.

HINT TO EXQUISITIES. - A celebrated Parisis dandy was ordered by his physicians to follow a course of sea bathing at Dieppe. Arrived at that delightful bathing town, he ordered a ma-chine and attendant, and went boldly into the water. He plunged in bravely; but in an instant came up puffing and blowing. "Francis, said he, "the sea smalls dete poison mo. Throw a little out de Cologue inte the water, or I shall be sufficiated !"

per if 112 pounds make one hundred weight, ow many will it take to make your wife state.

GENERAL JACKSON'S WIFE.

Mr. Parton tells the following story of Gen Jackson's wife:

When General Jackson was a candidate for the Presidency in 1828, not only did the party opposed to him abuse him for his public acts which, if unconstitutional or violent, were legitimate subject of reprobation, but they defamed the character of his wife. On one occasion a newspaper published in Nashville was laid upon the General's table. He glanced over it, and his eyes fell upon an article in which the character of Mrs. Jackson was he sent for his truste old servant Dunwoodie.

"Saddle my hore," said he to him in whisper, "and put my holsters on him."Mrs. Jackson watched him, and though she heard not a word, she thought she saw mischief in his eyes. The General went out, after a few moments, when she took up the paper and understood everything. She ran out to the south gate of the yard of the Hermitage, by which the General would have to She had not been there more than a few pass. seconds before the General rode up with the countenance of a madman. She placed herself before his horse, and cried out.

"Oh, General, den't go to Nashville! Let that poor editor live! Let that poor editor "Let me aione !" he replies, "how came on to know what I am going for ?" She answered, "I saw it all in his paper after you went out; put up your horse and go back.' He replied furiously,

"But I will go—get out of my way!"

instead of doing this, she grasped his bridle with both hands. He cried to her,

"I say, let go my horse; I'll have his heart's blood-the villain that reviles my wife shall not live!"

She grasped the reins but the tighter, and began to expostulate with him, saying that she was the one who ought to be angry, but that she forgave her persecutors bettom of her heart, and prayed for themthat he should forgive, if he had hoped to be forgiven. At last, by her reasoning, her entreaties and her tears, she so worked upon her husband that he seemed mollified to a certain extent. She wound up by saying, "No, General, you shall not take the life of even my reviler-you done not do it, for it is written, 'Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the

The iron nerved here gave way before the arnest pleading of his beloved wife, and re-"I yield to you; but had it not been for and the words of the Almighty, the wretch should not have lived an hour.

at It has been established by the courts, that the first stroke of the clock is the record of the hour.

Useful Receipts.

best way to insure fure from destruction by moths, is to pack all in a box or trunk lined with brown holland, first sprinkling toom with red pepper. This is better than camphor, for re in furs are often victimized by entomological neets, though their goods be saturated with this powerful odor. Before packing away fars, they should be well beaten, to dislodge any larve that, despite the most scrupule care, may be deposited in them. The superiority of pepper to camphor, as a preservative to furs, consists in the fact that, while larve will incubate among camphor, there is something in the aroma of pepper which destroys them is ambryo.

Picklis.-An excellent way to make picklet that will keep a year or more, is to drop them into boiling hot water, but not boil them; let them stay ten minutes, wipe them dry, and drop into cold spiced vinegar, and they will not ed to be put into salt and water.

To Cook BENEFITAK .- The following wer the rules adopted by the celebrated "Beefsteak Club," started in England, in 1733: Pound well your meat, until the fibres break; is sure that next you have, to broil the steak Good coal in plenty; nor a moment leave. But turn it over this way, and then that; The lean should be quite rare—not so the fat The platter new and then the juice receive

ut on your butter, place it on your n

Salt, pepper, turn it over, serve and eat. Hower .- Four pounds loaf sugar; 1} do. he ney; I quart of water; I big spoonful gum arabic; I teaspoonful cream tartar—put all to gether, and bell fifteen minutes. This will This will set chest the bost themselves .- Reval New Taylor, of Isleworth, who gave the details in 1788,) married my father to Miss Collier, in 1736. Old Mr. Collier was a very vain man, who had made his fortune in the South Sea year; and having been originally a merchant, was fond, after he had retired to live upon his fortune, of a great deal of display and parade. On his daughter's wedding, therefore, he invited nearly fifty persons, and got two or three capital cooks from London to prepare a magnient entertainment in honor of the day .-When other ceremonies had concluded, the young couple were put to bed, and every one of this appropriate assemblage came into the room to make their congratulations to my father and mother, who sat up is bed to re-ceive them. "Madam, I wish you a very good night. Mr, all happiness to you, and a very good night!" and so on through the party.— My father, who hated all parade, but was ed to submit to the old gentleman's humor must have been in a fine fume; and my nother, who was then but seventeen or eighttoon, sufficiently embarrassed.—Life of Ed-mund Malone, Editor of Shakapears. By Sir James Prior, M. R. L. A., F. S. A., &c.

EDWARD MALONE'S ANCESTORS.-He (Doctor

said a begging preacher to his decorous flock 'but an appearance of specie does mo Last year, when I preached for the peniten tiary, I saw nothing but shillings in the plate You must have thought, my brethren, that I was preaching for a tocales penny-tentiary.

Agricultural.

SHADING GREENBOCKES. - M. Boutin, in the ast number of La Revue Horticole, rec ommon tallow for this purpose. It should be lightly heated in an earthen vessel, and applied with a cotton rag to the glass when in an unctuous state, neither cold nor warm. We apprehend that, on a very hot summer day, riclently assailed. So soon as he had read it the tallow would become fluid, and drop down on the plants. Perhaps spermaceti or stearing might answer better. Some of our nursery men, who do not care for appearances, have used for this purpose plastering laths nailed on the upper side of the rafters above the sash, leaving openings of about an inch between the laths. One advantage about this mode of shading, is, that it answers even when the eash is lowered. Where neatness is desired, nothing looks so well, and is at the same time so efficient and durable, as sugar of lead ground in oil. It can be procured at almost any color shop, and resembles white lead. It should be greatly diluted with spirits of turpentine, and put on very thin with a brush. In putting it on, the brush should be kept very dry, and but little of the material should b used: in this way it is more evenly distributed over the glass. This is the material used by painters to produce the effect of ground

PLANT PEAS DEEP .- The theory recently advocated of planting peas very deep in the earth, in order to prolong the bearing capacity of the vines, has been well tested in Williamstown, and found to be correct. A farmer told me that he ploughed a furrow beam deep; then scattered the seed peas deep at the bottom; after which he turned a deep furrow upon them with his plough, covering them, is possible, to the depth of twelve or fourtee inches. They pushed their way up through the thick mass of earth very soon, and, instead of turning yellow at the bottom, and dying after the first gathering, they blossome and bore until he was tired of picking the pods. If such a result will uniformly be rea lized from the plant, pea culture may be mor profitable than hitherto.

HOW CORN IS PRESERVED IN RUSSIA.-At late meeting of the Academy of Sciences, held in Caris, a letter from M. de Seurchoff, a Russian landowner, was read, describing the man ner in which corn pits are made in that country. The pits are dug in a dry soil, and, in stead of masonry, the sides are hardened by a ong-continued exposure to a wood fire. Before the corn is introduced, the air in the pit is rarefied by burning straw in it, after which the grain is thrown in, packed close, and the pit tightly enclosed. Corn has been preserved in such pits for forty years.

PAINTED VESSELS FOR THE DAIRY .- At a disussion held by the Club of Little Falls, N. Y. it was established that newly painted vessels were the cause of discolored cheese, and that such cheese was more or less poisonous. The slightly connected. evil was to be met by painting tubs and pails in advance of their use, and their soaking them in whey or water until the poisonous substance in the lead was extracted. Tin versels were considered the most economical, as less troublesome to keep clean and sweet, be sides being light and easily handled.

SAND FOR BEDDING HORSES .- Mr. Small. reterinary surgeon of considerable experience and successful practice in Ulster, Ireland, states that in the present scarcity of straw, he uses sand for horses' beds in his repository; and further observes that sand is superior to straw, inasmuch as the former article does not retain heat, and also preserves horses' hoofs. Mr. Small's alleged successful experiment deerves extended circulation, now that the market price of straw is so high

A GREAT MILKER.-George Greig, Esq., Nonantum Hill, Newton, informs us that he has an Ayrshire cow which is now giving from twenty-eight to thirty quarts of milk a day She dropped a fine bull calf by an imported bull, belonging to an Agricultural Society in New Brunswick, about three week which, we understand, has been purchased by Hon. Josiah Quincy, Jr .- Bo

INSECTS ON STOCK.-Well kept stock, housed in clean, well littered, whitewashed stables are rarely, unless they take them from other cattle, troubled with vermin-but pulverized epperas and sulphur, in the proportion of one onful of copperas and two of sulphur, with a little salt-mixed in half a bushel of seal, given twice a week for three weeks, to 100 head of cattle or hogs, is said to be a com

The Riddler.

CHARADE.

WHIPPRE POR THE SATURDAY STREETS POST My first At any time of year The weather proving clear, Do not think me a seer

When I my-My first you can see, If your eyesight be free, O'er hilltop and tree, After day.

My second On the deep, dark sea, The pirate wild and free The pirate using me Is heard using me In the forest I am found, I in every tree abound,

Now, east your eye around-My whole is familiar to seamer W. WINDSOR.

SCRIPTURE ENIGMA.

Whose coming gladdened much the heart of Paul? Man's happy home ere Satan caused his fall. Who in an idot house helped slay his sire? Whose fock gran'd near the bush that burn'd with

What angel to a prophet said, "Fear not?" Who kissed her friend but would not share her lot? Who dwelt and judged beneath a stately palm, And 'midst the din of arms felt no alarm

If God's own word you search, as all should do, My rhyme will not a passic prove to you; Each name's initial only will you need To form a text which he who rune may read

CHARADE. WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. An insect of note, with one-third of a grain, The name of a liquor with case will explain.

(En

ongl

sible It is tense

in di

ing f fright

in litt

vergi

in chi

 M trusty

Warn

Lemo

has li

Vant.

maint

he is a ration

if he

But ti

my sei

As t

RIDDLE. Ladies, adore the shrine that sends Good reputation, many friends. I make you noble the' you're base In birth, 'tis I that give you grace. As thro' the mase of life you run, What paths you tread, and what you shun, Are taught by me : and, by my ray Inspir'd, I point the doubtful way. 'm constant, and sincers as truth, In age deeny'd no more than youth I'm every way exact and nice, Well bred, and free from every vice. reh all the ample world around,

PROBLEM.

No brighter jewel can be found.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

I have a piece of pasteboard one foot square equal squares from each corner. How large must the squares that I cut out be, so that the numb square inches in the inside surface of the box shall equal to the number of cubic inches in its caps-ARTEMAS MARTIN Franklin, Venango Co., Pa.

MATHEMATICAL PROBLEM. WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

In a pic-nic grove there is a common rope wing. The centre of oscillation is 75 feet from the point of suspension or centre of motion, and may be ned to swing through an arc of 100 feet. 1st. Required the number of vibrations per

2nd. The point and amount of its greatest ve-

3rd. The strain on the ropes, when the persons inging weigh 300 pounds Philadelphia. JOS. H. WARRINGTON.

The An answer is requested.

CONUNDRUMS.

Why is the first chicken of a brood like the emast of a ship? Ans.—Because it's a litt or'ard of the main-hatch. Once in a minute, twice in a moment, once n a man's life? Ans .- The letter M. Why is skinning an eel like an agreement for a separate maintenance? Ans. -- Because it is deed of separation Why is a man who spoils his children like cause he indulges in fancy (infancy) too much. Why are jokes like huts? Ans .- Because the drier they are the better they crack Why is a sheet of postage stamps like distant relations? Ans .- Because they are but nother who builds castles in the air? Ans .- Be-

ANSWERS TO RIDDLES IN LAST. RIDDLE-Love and beauty. ANAGRAMS-Gen. George Washington, Baron Humboldt, Stephen A. Douglas, Aaron Burr, Uncle Sam, Thomas

Paine, Shakspeare, Beethoven, James Buchanas, SCRIPTURAL ENIGMA.

We have received two answers to the excellent criptural Enigma in Tuz Post of April 14th-one from Mrs. L. E. Mabie, of Williamsport, Pa., the other from Robekah N. Chase, of East Machias, Maine-which are mainly correct, though both ser in respect to the fourth name, giving Peter instead of Paul the proper credit. The correct answer is as follows :

PREPARE TO MEET THY GOD .- Amos iv. 12

1 Sam. 1/4-7 P enionah 1 Kings xii. 12-16 R shobos E sra Ezra vii. 6 P aul Acta xxvii. 21 A mos Amos i. 5 R uth Ruth i. 16 2 Kings v. 25 E lisha : 2 Tim. iv. 13 T rose Deut. iii. 3-11 Exod. xv. 20. M irian E ara Neh. viii. 4 Esther iv. 16-11 1 Kings avi. 9-10 T irrab 2 Tim. iv. 13 T imothy Il iram Y okefplic I Kings v. 10 Phil. iv. 3

Judg. vi. 11 G ideon 2 Sam. zviii. 24 33 D arid horses with t